Warsaw Holds Out Despite German Gains

Congress Call Signals Fight On Arms by Isolationists

Assurance of Votes To Repeal Embargo Reported; Borah to Be on Radio Tonight

By William V. Nessly.
Post Staff Writer

Apparently given assurance of ultimate victory, President Roosevelt yesterday set the stage for a historic battle for repeal of this country's arms embargo by summoning Congress into extra session next Thursday, September 21.

He thus gave effect to his notice, issued when Congress failed at the last session to vote his proposed neutrality law revision, that if a new crisis threatened or materialized he would call Congress back to consider the issue again.

Promptly after the President issued his proclamation yesterday, the Senate isolationist group that is bitterly opposed to repealing the arms embargo, scheduled a Nation-wide broadcast tonight of an address in which Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, will attack the President's proposal.

Seeking to effectuate his appeal for "national unity" in the problems raised by the war in Europe, Mr. Roosevelt also telegraphed Republican and Democratic leaders of both houses, asking them to meet with him at the White House on the day before the special session convenes. At that time, it is assumed, he will endeavor to impress on Capitol Hill leaders his belief that Congress should be prevailed upon to give consideration only to those matters covered in the Presidential message, and then adjourn until the regular January session.

Faces Two Fights

Mr. Roosevelt faced, it appeared, two fights in the extraordinary session.

On his main objective of killing the arms embargo and permitting munition sales to all countries that will pay cash and carry their purchases away from America, it was understood his party leaders on the Hill had assured him of enough vote switches to accomplish it.

But the President clearly was to be denied his wish for a quick and quiet session. He has been represented as feeling the Government would be handicapped in its foreign relations should a long bitter fight over the repeal create the impression in Europe that the country was badly split in its attitude toward the war. However, the isolationist group—Senators Borah, Nye (Republican, of North Dakota; Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan; Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and others—has made it clear it will steadfastly fight the Chief Executive's proposal, and some members have not hesitated to talk of a filibuster, if one is necessary.

The President's second objective of limiting the extra session to neutrality, and possible strengthening of laws on profiteering, seemed headed for trouble, as members of Congress already here continued to talk of other matters they would like to bring up, and some insisted the two houses should remain in session steadily until the date for the regular session four months hence.

No Mention of Specific Matters

Yesterday's proclamation made no mention of specific matters to be presented by the Executive. It said:

"Whereas public interests require that the Congress of the United States should be convened in extra session at 12 o'clock, noon, on Thursday, the twenty-first day of September, 1939, to receive such communications as may be made by the Executive;

"Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Congress of the United States to convene in extra session at the Capitol in the City of Washington on Thursday, the twenty-first day of September, 1939, at 12 o'clock, noon, of which all members who shall at that time be entitled to act as members thereof are hereby required to take notice."

Those invited to the "informal" conference with the President are Vice President Garner, Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Senator Minton, Democratic whip; Senate Minority Leader McNary, Senator Aus-

Britain to Meet Air Bombings in Kind

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Copyright by New York Times.

London, Sept. 13.—Foreign Secretary Halifax warned Germany today that Great Britain would retaliate if the German high command carried out its reported threat to bomb open towns in Poland.

"Restrictions that His Majesty's government have imposed upon the operations of its own forces were based upon conditions of similar restraint being observed by its opponents," Lord Halifax told the House of Lords, after recalling the British acceptance of President Roosevelt's appeal not to bomb civilians.

"His Majesty's government must hold itself completely free, if such restraint is not in fact observed, to take such action as it may deem appropriate," Halifax declared.

For this was clear warning that German cities would not be spared by British and French airmen if the Germans themselves spread indiscriminate "frightfulness" upon Poland. It was another way of saying that Britain is in this war with her gloves off no matter what the cost to herself.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, speaking at the same time in the House of Commons, told of his visit to France yesterday to attend the Supreme War Council and declared that "the people of France and the people of Great Britain are alike determined not only to honor fully their obligations to Poland, but also to put an end at once and for all to the intolerable strain of living under the perpetual threat of Nazi aggression."

"Our French allies are, like ourselves, a peace-loving people," said the prime minister, "but they are no less convinced than are we, that there can be no peace unless the menace of Hitlerism has been finally removed."

Chamberlain's voice never rang with more determination than when he lapsed into French to add "Il faut en finir"—"It's got to be ended."

Answering a questioner, the prime minister repeated his recent pledge to former President Benes of Czecho-

Soviet Airmen Force Down 4 Polish Planes

Russia Defends Big Mobilization as Measure for Peace

By G. E. R. Gedye
Copyright by New York Times.

Moscow, Sept. 13.—Russia's big mobilization of reserves, official circles said today, was a perfectly natural defensive measure for the preservation of Russia's peace.

There was a disinclination to go beyond an official statement that the mobilization was due to the "increasingly threatening character of the war."

Tass, Soviet official news agency, reported today that a number of Polish bombing planes had flown over the Russian frontier and that four were forced down by Soviet planes and their crews detained.

Tass said that similar cases of border violations had "become more frequent and the violators have endeavored to penetrate far into Soviet territory."

Russian official circles express indignation over any suggestions that an attack on Poland or occupation of Polish territory is planned as "Soviet Russia still desires to preserve peace and keep out of war."

It was again recalled that Soviet Russia has nonaggression pacts with both England and Germany. With a major European war raging close to its frontiers none could be surprised, it was claimed, that Russia should take measures to safeguard her frontiers against any eventualities.

It is certain that Germany was surprised by Russia's move and none too pleasantly. Official Soviet circles naturally refuse to admit that partial mobilization is due to fears that Germany would attack her frontiers any more than Germans would admit fears that this mobilization may be directed against themselves.

Berlin Widens Counterattack On Blockade

Reich Lists More Goods as Contraband; Cites League Ruling

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 13.—The German government tonight published a contraband law which authoritative sources said was designed as a "defense measure against the English blockade." A decree also was issued changing regulations.

Explaining the necessity of such measures, the semiofficial Dienst aus Deutschland information service, which is close to the foreign office, said:

"By breaking legal international obligations and usage England has opened an economic war against Germany, which, according to English avowal, was to starve the German people.

Position Set Forth

"But this battle affects at least in the same measure neutral countries which are intended to be forced to renounce trade with Germany by genuine terroristic methods.

"If they do not bend to the English dictate then, just as Germany, they are to be starved out and cut off from their vital trade connections."

Earlier, Dienst aus Deutschland summed up Germany's position on the matter of neutral trade in five points:

"Germany regards it as an essential part of economic neutrality that the normal volume of exchange and transit of goods continue. In this, Germany considers she is backed by the League of Nations constitution.

Nazis Would Continue

"Second, in accordance with this principle, Germany is ready, and has given assurances to that effect, to continue its normal exports to neutral nations and accept normal exports from those nations into Germany.

"Third, Germany offers no objection against neutral nations con-

Pershing Urges Skeleton Army Be Built to Full Peace Strength

By Edward T. Folliard.

Gen. John J. Pershing, on his seventy-ninth birthday yesterday, said it was "not a very good time" to be celebrating birthdays. He was referring to the second world war in Europe. However, he did think it was a good time to remember the costly lessons of 1917 and do something about the United States Army, which he called a "mere skeleton."

The General of the Armies, after heartily approving President Roosevelt's recent emergency action in enlarging the Army, urged Congress to go further and bring the Army to its full peace-time authorized strength—280,000 Regulars and 424,000 National Guardsmen.

President Roosevelt ordered expansion of the Army to 227,000 and the Guard to 235,000. Even if full peace strength were achieved, as suggested by Pershing, Uncle Sam's force would rank thirteenth in the world, somewhere between the peace-time armies of Greece and Belgium.

Gen. Pershing, born September 13, 1860, in Linn County, Mo., son of a railroad foreman, posed on the lawn at Walter Reed Hospital for some 30 photographers and newsreel men. He was pale, but still forceful.

"Congratulations! How do you feel, General?" somebody said.

"Very gay," said the old A. E. F. commander.

He wore a blue, striped shirt, a light gray felt hat, and carried a cane. In his lapel was a bit of ribbon, insignia of the Distinguished Service Medal. He walked soldier-like down the lawn and came to a halt before the cameras.

French Close In on Chief City of Saar

Maginot Artillery Shatters Railroads; Siegfried Guns Stop Many Tanks

By Charles S. Foltz, jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 13. Two powerful French army forces were reported tonight to be folding like wings on the German city of Saarbruecken.

More troops were engaged in the drive on the rich center of the Saar mining basin, according to reports reaching Switzerland, than in any action since the war began.

It appeared a major drive to crack the first line of the German Siegfried fortifications was in progress.

Maginot Guns Smash Railways

The accurate marksmanship of Maginot Line gunners who for years had been taught the exact range of main objectives on the other side of the frontier shattered railroads at many points

The French laid down barrages on rail lines and highways leading into Saarbruecken and at the great Tiller Bluff overlooking the city on the south. Just on the other side of this bluff, which the Germans were reported to have turned into a stronghold with several batteries of guns, stands the Saarbruecken chateau, restored after the French destroyed it in 1793.

German defenders were reported to have staged bitter counter-attacks both against the Warndt Forest wing of the French advance southwest of the city and against the line creeping up from the other side.

Nazi Artillery Stops Tanks

French tanks were used in sectors where the terrain permitted, Basel reports said, and they frequently were stopped by modern German antitank guns, with which the Siegfried forts are supplied plentifully.

The day's fighting extended across rough, barren mining land east of the Warndt Forest already pitted with great shell holes, many of which opened a way into the mines below.

During the day local attacks were reported along the Moselle Valley, where the French tried to recapture positions which the Germans won back in yesterday's counterattacks.

Push Mile Into Saar

Paris, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—French forces were reported semiofficially tonight to have advanced a mile deeper into Germany's Saar mining basin in a drive that may bring the first major victory of the war on the Western Front.

The semiofficial Agence Radio, describing the French advance, carried on behind a screen of tanks and artillery fire, said that the German industrial city of Saarbruecken was menaced on the east and west.

The German defenders of the city, the agency added, were expected to retreat at any time and fall back to the Siegfried Line.

Move on Saar River

Saarbruecken was said to be a virtual no man's land, with the Germans in the northwestern section while French and German guns hammered the areas near the French frontier.

To the west of Saarbruecken one French force moved toward Voelklingen and Klarenthal, 6 and 8 miles away along the banks of the Saar River. To the east, above Sarreguemines, another French force advanced 1,500 meters (about 1 mile) to cut Saarbruecken's communications in that direction, the Agence Radio said.

Several hundred thousand British troops have landed in France unhampered either by submarine or aerial attack, it was announced tonight.

British sources in Paris reported tonight that British "Tommies" had taken part in their first battle on the Western Front, but no details were given.

The French general staff as yet has made no mention of British troops being in action.

French Retake Area

The Petit Parisien, whose analysis of action on the Western Front is regarded as bearing official approval, admitted today that the Germans had succeeded in seizing "a few hundred meters" of French territory in a counter-offensive Tuesday, but said all the ground had been recaptured by the French.

The German counter-assault, said

Half City Reported in Ruins; French Create War Cabinet

Paris Expected To Demand Freedom For Austria, Czechs If War Is Won

By John Elliott.
Copyright, 1939, by N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

Paris, Sept. 13.—Premier Daladier, completing a war cabinet this evening after ten days of laborious negotiations, has taken the destinies of France in his own hands.

He looms more than ever the dominating personality in his own government. Hitherto he has combined the offices of the premiership and of national defense in his own person, but to these he now has added the portfolio of foreign affairs.

Georges Bonnet, the architect of the Munich accord, who was easily the most vulnerable figure in the government, is ousted as foreign minister, and relegated to the minor post of minister of justice, succeeding Paul Marchandeau, the Mayor of Rheims, resigned.

The passing of Bonnet, co-author with Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop of the Franco-German declaration of last December, is a clear intimation to Fuehrer Hitler that the French government intends to see the war through to a victorious conclusion.

Two Offices Created

Two new cabinet offices have been created—a ministry of blockade and a ministry of munitions.

The first post is confided to Senator Georges Pernot, a 60-year-old Senator. The minister of munitions is Raoul Dautry, a retired president of the state railroad, who made a reputation as a railway organizer, and is counted upon to speed up French armament production.

Yvon Delbos, the foreign minister in Leon Blum's Front Populaire government of 1936, comes back to office as minister of education in place of Jean Zay, who resigned to join the army.

Senator Alphonse Rio becomes minister of merchant marine in place of Louis Chapdelaine, who is out because of illness.

Ministry Unimpressive

To assist him, Premier Daladier has appointed two undersecretaries—one at the ministry of national defense and the other at the foreign office. The first is filled by Hippolyte Ducos, a Radical Socialist, and the second by Champetier Ribes, who was pensions minister in the outgoing ministry, being replaced in this office by Rene Besse.

It cannot be said that the new ministry is particularly impressive. All the new ministers belong to Daladier's own Radical Socialist Party. There is no pretense of the new government being a ministry of national union, representing all political parties, such as Rene Viviani formed in August, 1914.

Blum, Edouard Herriot and Marshal Henri Petain are some of the outstanding personalities of the French political scene whose names do not appear in the list of the new ministry.

Herriot Not Satisfactory

Herriot was spoken of as a successor to Bonnet in foreign affairs, but it is reported that the conservative Senate demurred because of the mayor of Lyon's important part in negotiating the now defunct Franco-Soviet military alliance in 1935. Furthermore, Herriot, as an outstanding anti-Fascist, might prove offensive to Italy, whose neutrality France is courting.

One of the greatest surprises is the failure of Daladier to include Marshal Petain, the victor of Verdun and the present ambassador to Spain, in his reformed ministry. Petain was considered the likely choice for minister of national defense.

Next to Daladier, Paul Reynaud, the finance minister, remains the outstanding figure in the government. He will now take over the duties of the ministry of national economy, hitherto filled by Raymond Paternotre.

An indication of the peace terms that the government will insist upon at the end of a victorious war was given by the semiofficial Le Temps in an editorial this evening. This newspaper intimates that the evacuation of Poland by the German army, the liberation of Czecho-Slovakia and the re-formation of Austria as an independent state

BATTERED WARSAW still held out against German invaders, but Poland's army appeared in retreat on all other fronts, its lines shattered in at least four places.

FRANCE'S ARMIES were closing in on Saarbruecken, as severe fighting continued in the no-man's land between the French Maginot and German Siegfried lines from the Rhine southwest to the Moselle.

PREMIER DALADIER revamped his cabinet, adding the foreign ministry to his premiership and war portfolio, demoting Georges Bonnet.

GERMAN ARMIES completely surrounded Warsaw, Nazis said, and were besieging Modlin, while other columns cut the Lublin-Lwow highway and drove rapidly toward Lwow.

BRITAIN'S BLOCKADE was countered by a new German list of contraband, combined with sharp new warnings to neutrals not to let Britain's attitude induce them to reduce trade with the Reich.

BRITAIN WARNED Germany that if bombing of open Polish towns continued, British and French planes will retaliate.

UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR BIDDLE reported to the State Department that German planes are bombing noncombatants.

SOVIET RUSSIA was represented fearing a possible threat from Germany, despite their nonaggression treaty.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI will make a statement of Italy's position, the Fascist press said; no date was given.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT called Congress into session for a week from today.

Congressional, District Leaders Laud Post for Times Service

Again yesterday, leaders in business, professional and official Washington took time from their work to express their opinions, unanimously favorable, of the addition to The Post's coverage of the second World War of the dispatches of the New York Times.

They found in this addition "evidence of The Post's continued improvement" and stressed "the public benefits by having many sources of information."

Senator Borah, ranking Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, for instance, had this to say about The Post's latest addition to its thorough war coverage:

"The New York Times war news is an exceptional service and I think The Post is to be congratulated in bringing it to our very doors in Washington."

James A. Farley, the Postmaster General and chairman of the Democratic National Committee, gave this wholehearted praise:

"The Post is to be congratulated on adding the New York Times war news service to its coverage of the European war. The Times service, as is well known, is unbiased, thorough and reliable, and will prove a valuable supplement to the coverage which The Post has been giving."

At a meeting of key men in the city's annual Community Chest drive, evidence of appreciation of The Post's addition to its efforts to bring complete war news to Washington was plentiful.

Willi[illegible]st of the Am[illegible]rust Co., said the New York T[illegible] service was "evidence of The Post's continuing improvement."

Gdynia Believed To Be Beating Off Attack; Refugees Clog Polish Roads

By Daniel De Luce,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Lwow, Poland, Sept. 13 (via courier to the Rumanian Frontier).—Poland's battered army resumed its steady retreat to the east today after momentarily holding Germany's smashing land and air attack along the San and Vistula rivers.

Early Wednesday morning, when this dispatch was being written, the front, as nearly as could be told from fragmentary information reaching this bombed and famished city, had been broken by Nazi forces in four places:

Thirty miles northeast of Warsaw at Wyzskow.

Seventy miles south of Warsaw at Deblin, on the east side of the Vistula.

Forty-five miles south of Deblin at Krasnik.

50 Planes Bomb City

(A Polish officer broadcasting tonight from Warsaw, said more than 50 Nazi planes raided the city during the morning.

(Other Warsaw broadcasts described the Poles as still fighting off the German siege.

(A major of the Polish air corps and Warsaw's mayor described the siege of the Polish capital, declaring the German land and air bombardment had destroyed half the city and was continuing without let-up.

Curves East of Poznan

So fast is the German advance moving that none can tell where they will be at the end of the afternoon, but at this hour (early Wednesday) the front can be described roughly as running from the East Prussian frontier south to Lomza and to Wyszkow.

Then it bends in a long finger to the west by Modlin, Plock, Honensalza (Inowroclaw) and Cnienzo, curving a few miles east of Poznan to run back east to the south of Klodawa, south of Zyrardow, to the gates of Warsaw.

[This huge pocket west of Warsaw had been vastly reduced, if not entirely wiped out, German reports indicated. The fate of an unknown number of Polish divisions was uncertain. Poles insisted they were fighting their way toward Warsaw. Germans said they had been cut to pieces. Reports from American correspondents at Lodz Monday and Tuesday told of a furious battle in the eastern part of the pocket, centering around Kutno. The Germans, however, have not yet mentioned capturing Kutno—Editor's note.]

Then it runs south along the Vistula to the San River and down the San to 5 miles east of Jaroslaw.

From there the front goes through Przemysl, Chyrow and thence south to the Slovak frontier.

Heavy Air Raids

Heavy German air raids were reported over Bialystok and Lublin while Germany's armored columns plowed steadily ahead.

One column is advancing southward from Wyszkow to close off Warsaw from the east.

From the Vistula's east (right) bank the Nazi forces are advancing on Lublin. Another column is moving toward this city from Jaroslaw.

SOLDIERS WITH NEW FACES.

When the war debate begins on the Hill some embattled isolationist Senator is apt to borrow a curious exhibit from the other end of town.

Harlan Miller

near the White House, and roll it into the Senate foyer, or perhaps drag it right on the floor of the Senate itself, for the more martial Senators to view with agonized eyes.

It will bring them a strong whiff of trenches and shell-holes and torn flesh.

* * * *

The exhibit is housed in a smallish glass showcase as tall as a man, the sort of showcase in which druggists in my home town used to keep candy from melting in warm weather.

Now it is obscurely hidden in a corner of the basement at the Red Cross building, and it contains clay masks of faces from which noses, chins, cheeks and eyes were torn by shellfire in the last war.

* * * *

These missing chins and noses were admirably repaired, by a grateful country, though perhaps not as good as new, with other chunks of flesh. If the remodeling was not artistic enough, it was topped off with an aluminum mask to restore the beauty of the soldier and make him presentable to admiring noncombatants.

Perhaps a brief description of this skillful solicitude is in order, while we are all in a warlike mood.

"—his new chin was a dandy"

On the left is a mild case, a chin shot off so the inside of the mouth was exposed from underneath.

Strangely enough, the lower lip remained intact. A sort of a new flesh chin was grafted on, but it was not a chin that would photograph well.

So a well-modeled chin mask of aluminum was fitted over it, neatly tinted a realistic skin color. I can hear the nurse saying:

"Aren't you proud of your new chin?"

* * * *

Next to the chin case is one a little more complicated. A whole right eye had been gouged out by in a shell, from cheek bone to eyebrow. It's a masterly job: the aluminum mask simply covers the whole cavity, with a cunning socket for a glass eye.

Mo[illegible]n a darkened theater you couldn't tell the two eyes apart, hardly.

* * * *

Now comes a fairly serious case. On this face the right eye, nose and upper lip were smashed and destroyed.

The lip was fairly well restored, but the nose wasn't so good; so the aluminum mask not only provides a socket for the glass eye, but also the outline of a rather handsome nose.

A false mustache covers the junction of the metal nose and the revamped lip.

Noses are easy with aluminum, and often handsomer than the original, though it's not so easy to put on new eyes as to smash the old ones.

The new nose is usually straight and classical, though if the patient insists he can have his old nose reproduced from photographs. Specs help hold on the metal nose mask, and false mustaches help appearances.

They can made two enemy soldiers who shot each others faces off look exactly alike.

"—new limbs for old, too"

You might admire especially the face whose lower part was blown away—chin, lower lip and lower cheeks back to the ears. The mask covers all that, and handsomely, including a metal lower lip tinted a bright carmine. It's all held on by a wire that goes around over the ears . . . Quite a few old soldiers wear ears made of aluminum, deceptive except to the touch.

* * * *

The second best aluminum face is worth noting. It includes a neat eyebrow and part of the forehead, eye, right cheek, nose and part of the upper lip. The lower lip and chin are badly distorted, but they're not masked, and that old soldier can chew with his mask on. You are repelled as by an artificial flower where a real one should be.

* * * *

The real masterpiece is an aluminum face mask which covers nose, mouth, both lips, the entire chin and both cheeks up to the cheek bones. The eyes and forehead are the ones God gave him.

This is a handsome, almost an "arrow collar" face, but he must take off his mask to chew. And probably to sleep; and when he looks in the mirror, mask off . . .

* * * *

It's the noses that are easiest to reproduce and even to improve, because they're the oftenest crushed, smashed or splintered flat to the face, and the flesh and aluminum sculptors have learned how to make better noses. They're easier than chins or cheeks.

Noses are oftenest shot off, as Senator Borah is apt to point out (and he'd be only partly right) when they're thrust into other people's business. But who know what's our business and what isn't?

Don't say I didn't tell you.

Roosevelt Names Glass Friend to Job

Heath Appointment to Customs Post Seen as Appeasement Move

By Felix Cotten.

President Roosevelt and Senator Glass, veteran Virginia Democrat, have made peace so far as Government patronage appointments in Virginia are concerned.

This was revealed yesterday when James Elliott Heath, of Norfolk, a close friend of Glass, was given a recess appointment as collector of customs at Norfolk.

The appointment is looked upon in some quarters as a White House "appeasement" move toward Glass, who engaged in a sharp tilt with the President last February after Floyd H. Roberts had been named to a Federal judgeship vacancy in the western Virginia judicial district.

Roberts' nomination was rejected by the Senate by a 72-to-9 vote after Senators Glass and Byrd declared that the appointment was "personally obnoxious" to them. In May, the President appointed Armistead M. Dobie, dean of the University of Virginia law school, to the judgeship. The Virginia Senators had no objection to Dobie, and he was confirmed.

Definite Progress Seen

Congressional sources said yesterday that definite progress had been made toward a rapprochement between the President and conservative Democrats whose relations with the White House at least have been strained.

One example cited was the telegram which the President sent to Senator George, of Georgia, expressing concern over an eye operation which the Senator was to undergo. George, it was recalled, was one of those the Administration tried unsuccessfully to "purge" in the 1938 Democratic primaries.

Speculation likewise arose as to whether the President and Postmaster General Farley had arrived at a definite understanding, at least for the duration of the existing war emergency. Farley was the President's luncheon guest yesterday, and spent two hours in a heart-to-heart talk with his chief.

First Confidential Chat

It was the first real confidential chat he had had with the President since he returned from a European vacation trip. Just before Farley went to Europe, it is recalled, he stopped by Hyde Park to see the President. His visit was publicized as in the nature of a showdown meeting over the third term question.

Emerging from the White House, Farley pleaded for an armistice on political partisanship during the present emergency. "I don't think," he said, "that the people are interested in politics at the moment."

He said he thought Mr. Roosevelt used excellent judgment in canceling his scheduled speech before the Democratic women on Saturday. He felt that the present situation was "disconcerting to some candidates"—he did not say whether Republican or Democratic, or both.

Gratified at Appointment

Asked about the Heath appointment, Glass said no candidate was formally recommended by the Virginia Senators because each of six candidates for the place were friends of the Senators and they were willing to vote to confirm any one of them.

"I am very much gratified at the appointment," he declared. "Mr. Heath has been my devoted friend for 30 years or more."

Asked whether the appointment meant that the slate had been wiped clear so far as the controversy over the judgeship was concerned, he replied that the choice was "very different."

"Naturally, I would prefer to be on friendly terms with the White House," he said.

Glass declared he had consistently been in favor of the Administration cash-and-carry proposal so far as arms shipments are concerned, and would support this proposal in the special session.

Profiteerers Face Legal Action, Arnold Warns

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, Sept. 13.—Thurman W. Arnold, official "trust-buster" for the United States Government, served notice today that his office would make generous use of the criminal indictment to break up war-time "profiteering."

He spoke before the National Petroleum Association, which comprises most of the country's oil men.

Arnold said his office was being "flooded" with letters complaining about current "profiteering." He said his office would take swift action to "deter reckless offenders from getting started and compelling orderly business men to follow in self-protection."

"I regret," he said, "that my instrument of prevention happens to be the criminal indictment. I hope that legislation will be passed which will put the differences between the oil industry and the anti-trust division on the civil side of the docket by providing adequate civil penalties. Until that happens, I will be forced to continue using the criminal indictment."

Goddess of Freedom to Get A Soapless Beauty Treatment

By Gerald G. Gross

Freedom, the Capitol's "glamour girl," will get her long-awaited beauty treatment. Her trim, 14,985-pound bronze figure, surmounting the dome of the Capitol is going to get a going over from head to foot by workmen of the Capitol architect. She is shown here getting a "facial," first step of the cleaning job, which was begun in August and will be resumed again as soon as the weather permits.

Come good weather, maybe today or maybe tomorrow, Washington's No. 1 girl friend will get the beauty treatment she's been awaiting four years, complete right down to a pedicure on her bronze toenails.

Under general supervision of the architect of the Capitol, workmen will swarm over the Goddess of Freedom, whose familiar figure surmounts the dome, and when they're through, well, you probably won't recognize the old girl.

"Our regular crew will do the job," Horace D. Rouzer, assistant architect of the Capitol, announced, explaining that it wasn't necessary to call in a steeplejack specialist.

She Won't Be Soaped

The job will involve cleaning the birds nests out of Miss Freedom's ears, overhauling her lightning protection system and touching up her complexion a bit, as the girls will understand. Formerly she got a soap and water bath but that won't be done this time, said Rouzer, because scrubbing does not work so well with the verdigris deposits on the statue.

The Goddess of Freedom is one of the most misundrstood and misinterpreted girls in the Capitol. Tourists take her for Pocahontas, a replica of the Statue of Liberty, Miss America and various other things.

This is the straight lowdown on her, collected from Capitol archives.

She was designed in Rome by Thomas Crawford, an American, and installed on December 2, 1863. He received $3,000 for his model. Clark Mills got $9,800 for the casting in bronze and the total bill amounted to $24,000.

She Is 19 Feet 6

She weighs 14,985 pounds, is 19 feet 6 inches tall, has a 3-foot-long face and it is a good thing she isn't ticklish because workmen will not only point up her exterior, but climb inside her (she's hollow) to do a paint job.

Each of the ornamental balls on her robe will be tightened up and the platinum tips, part of the lightning rod system, on her feathered helmet, shoulders, shield and robe will be removed for checking and repairing.

Members returning for the special session of Congress may regard the Goddess of Freedom with particular interest. Crawford, her designer, said he meant the figure to symbolize "armed liberty." She is a peaceful girl, he said, but her sword—although sheathed—is ever ready for business.

Even Oceans Aren't at Peace, Geophysical Union Informed

Dissatisfied Eddies Always at Work, Norwegian Oceanographer Reveals; War May Delay Gulf Stream Study

Instead of being large bodies of water at peace with themselves and the world, oceans are made up of dissatisfied eddies, currents working at cross purposes, and hetrogeneous "seas"—each seeking its place in the sun.

Around volcanic cones sticking up from the bottom, the ocean even sometimes races with a marked cyclonic movement, Dr. B. Helland-Hansen, Norwegian scientist who is president of the Association of Oceanography, of the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics, said last night in a lecture at the Department of Commerce Auditorium.

Gulf Stream Study Delayed

Dr. Helland-Hansen is one of a group of oceanographers who have been making an international survey of the mysterious Gulf Stream—a survey which would have been completed during 1941 but doubtless will be delayed by the European war.

Boats from six nations, including Germany, have been used in the study, and 1941 was to have been a banner year for them. The work was to have been wound up with a flourish, with scientists making final checkups from boats stationed all along the stream.

Echo-soundings made in the Azores have led to a revision of ocean-bottom maps in that region, and the waters in the central part of the Gulf Stream near the Azores show local variations "which to many oceanographers will be quite amazing," Dr. Helland-Hansen declared.

"In many cases the local variations in the water seem to be closely connected with variations in bottom topography, which—as we know—has proved to be much more complicated than previously assumed," he said, exhibiting charts which showed marked changes in ocean temperatures at given depths and also in salt content.

Scientists Make Trips

Scientists attending the union sessions made trips yesterday to the observatory at Cheltenham, Md., to Frederick, Md., and to the National Bureau of Standards.

At Cheltenham they studied equipment operated jointly by the Department of Commerce and the Carnegie Institution to maintain the international magnetic standards. At Frederick they observed engineers of the Coast and Geodetic Survey erect a 90-foot portable triangulation tower and illustrate how the cost of surveying in wooded areas has been reduced more than 50 per cent by the tower method. The hydraulic laboratory and current meter rating tank were objects of interest at the Bureau of Standards.

Reds Mobilize Against Nazis, Dies Is Told

A Democratic Russia Is an Aid to Poland, Publisher Asserts

By John B. Oakes

The reported mobilization of Russian troops is directed not against Poland but against Germany, the Communist head of a New York publishing house told the Dies Committee yesterday.

Alexander Trachtenberg, member of the national committee of the American Communist Party for many years and manager of International Publishers, asserted that the Nazi-Soviet pact "helped Poland by isolating Germany."

Trachtenberg told the committee the nonaggression treaty "exposed Chamberlain's maneuvers and saved Russia from war." The witness concluded that "a free, democratic Russia will always be a help to Poland."

Trachtenberg frequently exchanged witticisms with committee members, including Chairman Dies.

To Recall Kuhn

At an executive session following Trachtenberg's testimony, the committee decided to recall Fritz Kuhn, leader of the German-American bund, and to "redouble" its heretofore fruitless efforts to find William Dudley Pelley, chief of the Silver Shirts, who recently filed libel suits against members of the committee totaling $3,000,000.

Trachtenberg testified that International Publishers has been subsidized since 1924 by A. A. Heller, a wealthy retired manufacturer and a reputed Communist.

Heller, said the witness, had invested $115,000 in the firm, which has published the works of many Communist writers, including Marx, Lenin and Stalin.

Closely questioned by the committee as to Heller's background, Trachtenberg said Heller had headed the International Oxygen Co., and had "made plenty of money" out of a concession in Russia.

Denies Firm Is Linked

Trachtenberg denied that International Publishers has any relationship with the Communist Party. He said there were "40 or 50" Communist bookshops throughout the country.

J. B. Matthews, committee investigator, asked the witness what his firm did with left-over copies of works of Communist authors who have been "purged," such as Bukharin, former editor of Pravda.

"We still have them," answered Trachtenberg. "I don't think his books are in demand," he added, to the laughter of committee members.

"When a man is purged in Russia, the party repudiates him all over the United States," observed Dies.

Trachtenberg for at least eight years was treasurer of World Tourist, a travel organization, but now wasn't sure if the firm lost money. This organization, he claimed, has "no relationship at all" with the Communist Party. However, another organization of which he is director, the newly founded Intercontinental News Service, has a connection with the party, he said.

Supplies Labor News

The news service supplies labor news to about 40 papers, many in Latin America, Trachtenberg stated.

Committee members asked the witness, who is an American citizen born in Russia, what stand he would take if war broke out between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Asserting that "I don't conceive it possible," Trachtenberg suggested that such a war was as likely as a war "between the District of Columbia and Maryland." Later, Mathews asked him if "the interest of the Soviet government is paramount in the event of a new world war."

"It is," the witness responded.

175,000 Textile Workers Get Wage Boost

Andrews Overrules Southern Protest, Sets 32½-Cent Minimum

By the United Press.

Wage Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews yesterday overruled protests of Southern employers and ordered wage increases for approximately 175,000 workers in the textile industry.

Andrews approved, effective October 24, a national minimum wage of 32½ cents per hour for the 630,000 textile workers. The present minimum is 25 cents an hour.

Southern manufacturers had opposed the recommendation vigorously and enlisted the aid of some of the most prominent Democratic legislators in the Nation to carry their protests direct to President Roosevelt.

Tyre Taylor, Washington, attorney for the American Cotton Manufacturers Association, refused comment last night on the prospects for a legal attack on Andrews' wage order. He referred questioners to A. M. C. A. President K. P. Lewis at Durham, N. C., or Secretary-Treasurer W. M. McClaurine at Charlotte, N. C.

Taylor estimated that approximately 150,000 of the employes who will receive pay raises work in Southern mills.

The wage decision was a victory for New England manufacturers and labor interests who had supported the wage recommendation of the industry committee, headed by Donald M. Nelson, Chicago, Sears-Roebuck and Co., vice president.

The industry committee had split, 14 to 6, in voting the wage recommendation.

Southern manufacturers contended they could not afford to pay more than 30 cents an hour, the national minimum for all interstate industries after October 24.

Their leaders told Mr. Roosevelt that some Southern mills may be forced to close when the higher wage becomes effective.

But Andrews decided that the wage order would not result in "substantial curtailment of employment."

Chest Drive to Ignore War in Europe

Unless unforeseen events mar present plans, the war in Europe will not affect Washington's annual Community Chest drive, scheduled to open November 8, it was decided yesterday at a joint meeting of the advisory and campaign committees.

Chauncey G. Parker, jr., Chest chairman, said increased vigilance for the health and welfare of the people of Washington through the "American way of living and giving" will be the keynote. He urged Chest workers to "stand by" during the coming campaign "in order that we may steer a straight and true course."

That a feeling of confidence prevails toward the drive in most American cities was reported by Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Chest, who recently returned from a national meeting of Chest agencies in New York.

"Reports of war suffering among people of Europe are arousing an even deeper concern for the equally real suffering and emergencies which must be coped with day by day right here in Washington," Willett said.

The workers at yesterday's meeting—nearly 100 strong—agreed the Washington Chest campaign should be conducted on the same basis as in past years.

Leaders Fear 'Boom' Might Ruin Upswing

Business Men Warn Against Speculation In Commerce Parley

Nine top-flight industrial and financial executives, conferring yesterday with Commerce Department officials, expressed concern lest "an uncalled for" speculative boom reacts unfortunately on what they conceded to be a generally favorable business outlook.

The business leaders met with Undersecretary of Commerce Edward J. Noble and a dozen of the department's economic experts. It was learned that although there were many conflicting opinions of the effect the European war might have on American business, a general meeting of minds was reached in deploring runaway price movements and waves of speculative advance buying.

Agree in Optimism

The conference was in general agreement, it was understood, on the fact that conditions were favorable for a continuation of the moderate business upswing of the last three or four months. Prospects were not considered such as to justify the general price increases of last week, most of the conferees decided.

One official said business could be injured, as in 1936 and 1937, by speculation in anticipation of advances which were not justified by existing circumstances.

Each business representative outlined prospects in his own industry and concluded that there were no immediate bottlenecks to make for high prices, it was reported. There are ample credit, capacity and resources in America, it was agreed, to keep production to a level where there would be no scarcity of goods.

Some members of the conference, it was learned, believed the war could cause substantial increase in trading abroad. Others pointed to the fact that Germany and Poland would no longer be able to buy from this country, and that England had already announced a license system which would curtail certain types of its former imports from America. Inability of Latin-American countries to find the means of payment might make difficult a larger volume of trade to South America, they said.

Purpose of the conference, called before the outbreak of war, was to inform the Commerce Department of the opinion of the business community on economic conditions and prospects. General Government policies, it was learned, were scarcely touched on.

Ask Quicker Statistics

Business leaders asked the Commerce Department to accelerate their statistical activities, whose timeliness was seen as increasingly important.

The business economists attending the conference were S. L. Andrew, American Telephone & Telegraph Co.; H. S. Bennion, Edison Electric Institute; A. F. Cleveland, Association of American Railroads; Allen Temple, National City Bank; Bradford B. Smith, United States Steel Corporation; Donald B. Smith, Scudder, Stevens & Clark; Paul Weber, Hercules Powder Co.; N. R. Whitney, Procter & Gamble Co., and T. V. Houser, Sears Roebuck.

Among the department officials present were Willard L. Thorp, economic adviser to the secretary, and James W. Young, newly appointed director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Capt. Rickenbacker Strips War of Glamour, Appeals for Peace at Rotary Father-Son Fete

"Dad's a great guy," thought the youngsters yesterday as they sat beside their fathers at the Rotary Club luncheon. It was the annual Father and Son Banquet. They heard Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker (top, left), the World War ace, speak. Typical of the way they got together is the picture (top, right) of Bill Dingwell, 5, and his dad, James D. Dingwell, jr. Charley Malone, the Redskin star, was there. Lower (left to right)—Tom Eagan, son of the club's president, Thomas L. Eagan; Malone, Llewellyn D. Nickolson, chairman of boy's work, and Charley Holt, of the Georgetown Boys' Club

America's greatest World War pilot, one who shot down 26 enemy planes, yesterday sent a dramatic appeal for peace ringing through a banquet hall filled with boys who think war is glamorous.

Addressing a father-and-son party sponsored by the Washington Rotary Club at the Willard Hotel, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker voiced the hope that "Congress will see fit to be guided by a just consideration of the youths who must pay the penalty, if there will be one to pay."

"I shudder at the thought of my two boys being forced to go through what I went through in 1917 and 1918," said the ace, an honor guest at the luncheon party. "The weapons of destruction today are the deadliest man can create.

"Right now boys are being blown to bits over there. Let us think of our youth, who must bear the burden in war."

In a lighter vein, Capt. Rickenbacker urged fathers and sons to be pals. No man, he declared, should be too busy to devote some time each day to his sons.

More than 150 sons, including 40 youngsters from the Georgetown Boys Club, attended the party, which was spiced with the presence of sports celebrities and the award of numerous prizes.

Under the goading of Rotarian Frank Shipe, program chairman, Ossie Bluege, veteran infielder of the Washington Senators, confessed he thinks the Yankees will take the American League pennant and Ty Cobb was the greatest ball player.

Charley Malone, rangy end, put in a plug for the Washington Redskins football team; Nick Altrock contributed a comic monologue, and bows were taken by football coaches of the District colleges, Jack Hader, the wrestler, and other sports luminaries.

A round of applause also went to Rotarian Henry Brewood, the only great-grandfather present; at least, the only one who brought the proof along. The proof was 8-year-old Warren Brewood Nye.

Transfer Aided Insurance Officials, Inquiry Told

E. Lee Trinkle, former Governor of Virginia, and other officers of the Shenandoah Life Insurance Company, of Roanoke, Va., which carries policies of 84,000 Government employes, were relieved of $300,000 in personal obligations with the change from a stock to a mutual organization, according to testimony heard yesterday by a Federal Monopoly sub-committee.

John P. Saul, jr., executive vice president, of Roanoke, testified that scores of loans were made by the insurance company to its officials and directors until the loans were prohibited by a Virginia State law enacted in 1934. The loans aggregated $714,000, he said.

Following the recounting of a complicated financial transaction involving the purchase of 20,000 shares of stock in the company from five officers, Representative Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, asked Saul if the change from stock to mutual set-up had not "bailed out company officials of $300,000 in personal obligations they could not meet."

"Yes, it did in a way," the witness said after explaining that the change in corporate structure enabled the officers to pay $300,000 to Lehman Brothers, New York banking concern, which held the stock as collateral on a loan.

The obligations were owned, Saul said by himself, Trinkle, now president of the company; Dr. J. H. Dunkley, of Roanoke, medical director, and the late R. H. Angell, founder and first president of the company.

Saul said that $43,000 in loans were still outstanding, including a number of unsecured notes on which officers and directors were making interest payments and small monthly payments on the principal.

Government employes' stake in the concern, the witness said, was $113,500,000, taken out through 16 voluntary beneficial organizations.

Reorganization of the company will not be completed for some years due to the slowness with which the stock is being acquired. Dividends, meanwhile, Saul said, will be paid only to the Shenandoah Holding Corporation, which sold the mutual concern 20,000 shares. The holding company was established by Saul, Trinkle and other officers.

Census Heads Fear Congress Will Violate Secrecy

Fear that the traditionally confidential character of the decennial census will be voided by Congressional action providing that the individual returns be made available to other branches of the Government concerned with emergency preparedness was voiced yesterday by Census Bureau officials.

They pointed to suggestions privately and publicly made by Army and Navy officers that certain data of the prospective 1940 population enumerations would be invaluable in marshaling the nation's military and economic resources if emergency control should become necessary.

Census experts, however, declared the entire value of the census would be destroyed were data on individual citizens ever disclosed to any officers other than those in the Census Bureau, who are sworn to secrecy.

"With all the laws in the world forcing them to reply and give accurate information," one official said, "citizens would, nevertheless refuse to co-operate or would give false information."

He said that those concerned with using the statistical summaries were afraid the figures would be misleading unless strict confidence were assured.

Nazi Bombers Dared by Editor

London, Sept. 14.—Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express today defied Hitler to send his bombing squadrons over Britain.

"There is a story that the Germans threaten to bomb British harbors with fleet of 3,000 airplanes," the Express remarked and then stated:

"Come on then, try it! Bomb us! It's just what we want you to do. For we are completely confident that if ever we get your bombers over our coasts precious few of them will get back to the fatherland."

The Express is not noted as the organ of the British government.

Old-Fashioned Physician Treats Cancer With Whisky and Chicken Cocktail and Vitamins

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 13.—A new treatment for cancer, of vitamins plus an extract of healthy, youthful tissues, was reported to the Third International Cancer Congress today by Dr. J. R. Davidson, of Winnipeg, Canada.

He is a general practitioner, one of the last of the "old-fashioned" doctors. Stocky, aged 69, but dark-haired and looking not over 50, he has been working nights in his basement on cancer clues which he got in treating human beings.

He described the treatment of three humans by his methods. He said that his work points toward a possible way of prevention. He suggested, moreover, that cancer may be a disease like diabetes, which is not cured by the remedies used, but whose progress is arrested so that the victim lives in comparative health for many years.

The vitamin idea is not new in cancer treatment. Dr. Davidson's addition came from an experiment with one of the queerest cocktails ever made. The cocktail contained the tiny, embryonic bodies of a dozen or more chicks from eggs that had been incubated several days.

Whisky was added to make it palatable. The cocktails were made, and drunk, by a woman over 80 with several cancers. She owned a chicken farm. In addition to the chicken cocktail, she was fed a high vitamin diet.

In one year the visible signs of her cancers, which were large swellings, had disappeared, Dr. Davidson said she died later, and he believed cancer caused her death, but that surgery proved conclusively that the growths had been cancer.

This happened in 1931, and gave him the idea for the extract he reported today. He spent the next seven years making it in his basement. It required breeding of white mice for years to make them cancer-resistant.

Then last year, from the young of these noncancerous mice, he made an extract, which was the filtered liquids of their whole bodies. His theory is that cancer is due to failure of the malignant, fast-growing cells to "differentiate," that is, to develop fully. He thinks youthful tissues contain a stimulant to the cell "differentiation," and that tissues of concer-resistant young animals should be the best source.

Last October he began injecting this extract subcutaneously into an aged woman with a bad case of breast cancer. He also gave her the high vitamin diet, which included vitamin A, brewers' yeast for the vitamin B "complex" and vitamin E. There was plenty of milk, special bread containing 25 per cent of wheat germ, and plenty of rare steak.

After four months his basement laboratory could not supply enough of the mouse extract and he went back to the embryonic chicks. But this time he gave it as a hypodermic, intsead of a whisky cocktail.

He showed the Congress the results in photographs. The woman is still alive, her breast cancer is smaller, it has grown softer, and a deep crater in its middle has partly filled with healthy-looking tissue.

200 Survivors From Athenia Reach America

Torpedo Story Repeated By Passengers of City of Flint

By the Associated Press

Halifax, Nova Scotia, Sept. 13.—More than 200 ill-clad and shaken survivors of the liner Athenia were moved swiftly toward their homes tonight after telling of a nightmare at sea—of a "torpedo" streaking toward their ship, of a periscope slithering past a crowded lifeboat, of survivors screaming in fear of another "explosion."

Some still clutched their life preservers as they came ashore from the rusty American freighter City of Flint, where for ten days they had lived in accommodations built only for a small crew. Dozens were treated in a hastily erected hospital by a staff of doctors and 26 nurses.

Scattering for their homes, many took advantage of a special train for Montreal, equipped with a hospital car. It departed at 4:12 p. m. (Eastern standard time). Others reboarded the City of Flint for a slower trip to American ports. A few left by automobile, at least two flew down to New England, and one man accepted passage on an American Coast Guard cutter for New York.

Girl Tells Story

Pretty Mary Lee Humlong, San Angelo (Tex.) college student, who had sailed from Glasgow aboard the City of Flint, told newsmen:

"When the sea became rough, especially the first night after the survivors came on board, some of those in the holds began screaming and became hysterical at every noise. Some shouted, 'We're being torpedoed.'"

Franklin Dexter, of Boston, kissed his bride of a month good-by and placed her in a lifeboat, remaining aboard the Athenia to see that there were enough boats for the women and children. He was picked up later.

Mrs. Dexter, wearing men's shoes and borrowed clothing, hated to talk of her expereince.

"We felt just a jolt when the explosion came," she said. "Oh, it was terrible. I can't describe it."

Woman Rowed Eight Hours

"We almost hit the submarine," said Mary Katherine Underwood, of Athens, Tex. "We were in a boat with 38 women and only 3 men. A little while after we left the Athenia's side we saw the periscope of the submarine and nearly hit it. I didn't see her come to the surface."

Miss Caroline Stuart, of Plainfield, N. J., chimed in:

"I rowed for eight continuous hours. Look at these hands."

They still were covered with blisters.

Wearing a borrowed chef's hat, Mrs. McMillan Wallace, of Hamilton, Ontario, told of seeing a periscope just before the Athenia was struck.

"The boy in the crow's nest was the first to sight it," she said. "He shouted down, and I could see a periscope sticking out of the water about an eighth of a mile away. I didn't see the torpedo but I saw a white streak of foam running out from the submarine. Then I heard the crash."

The lifeboat of Elizabeth Brown, of Houston, Tex., capsized just after she removed her life preserver. Tersely, she said, "I saw one man gasp for breath and die. It was horrible."

Debutantes Wash Dishes

G. W. Dow, Lone Pine, Calif., almost strangled by oil scum as he clung to the side of a lifeboat, gave credit for his life to an elderly lady "who kept reaching over the side and patting me on the head and saying, 'Hang on a little longer.'"

Capt. Joseph Gainard of the City of Flint, who was days without sleep, said he was sure in his own mind the Athenia was torpedoed. On the lighter side, he told how "beds" were made from rough tarpaulins, stretched in rows, with each row "named after a street." Debutantes and coeds washed dishes and helped run the ship, he said, even putting on a "style show" to calm the more excited.

But there was tragedy, too. Mrs. John Hayworth, of Hamilton, Ontario, had to be helped from the ship. Her 10-year-old daughter, Margaret, died at sea from a brain injury suffered in the Athenia "explosion."

The Red Cross gave "pocket money" today to the survivors.

There was plenty of "free clothing" and "free food" as well, but few were hungry. Montgomery Evans, of New York, one of the survivors, told newsmen, "There was plenty of food aboard the City of Flint—good food, too. I've eaten worse in many country hotels."

14 Navy Bombers Leave for Hawaii

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 13 (AP).—Fourteen naval patrol bombing planes roared away from San Diego Bay today on a 2,500-mile nonstop transfer for Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

The flight was shrouded in secrecy and it was indicated that the Navy would not disclose position reports during progress of the flight.

lines, cities and civilian population on the roads.

"No change on the Suwalki front. Our troops along the Narew and Bug rivers are in the midst of heavy fighting. The enemy is using a large number of bombing airplanes.

"On the Modlin front no changes.

"On the Warsaw front the population of the capital is repelling German attacks with a great spirit of sacrifice and heroism.

"In the Kutno region our divisions are marching eastward in heavy fights with the enemy. On the San River front the fighting continues."

German Tank Claimed

The agency said, in a dispatch from Warsaw:

"The army and the civilian population of Warsaw are repelling with an incomparable heroism the concentric attacks of overwhelming enemy forces. Antiaircraft artillery dispersed German bombers who attacked the city yesterday 14 times.

"A German tank which succeeded in penetrating one of Warsaw's suburbs was captured and disarmed by the civilian defenders, mostly women and children.

"The enemy continues bombarding the civilian population and evacuation trains. An evacuation train running from Warsaw to Lwow had to stop 72 times to permit the passengers to get off to avoid bombing.

"In spite of German radio announcements to the contrary, Gdynia remains in Polish hands."

Water Supply Cut

Behind the front conditions are chaotic.

German bombs have smashed the Lwow aqueduct and nearly half a million residents of this city get water only through ancient hand pumps.

Physicians fear a plague.

From dawn until dusk, German planes are over the city.

Fires are burning in many parts of the city.

Similar descriptions are brought from nearly every city and town in Poland by road-weary, dusty refugees who are disregarding police orders and stampeding from their homes in wild hopes of reaching Rumania and safety.

The roads are so choked with panic-stricken civilians afoot, on bicycles, in peasant carts drawn by emanciated horses that the military is hampered severely in the movement of supplies.

As fast as the Poles repair railway lines, German airplanes smash them up again.

By now most Poles seem resigned to the steady German advance. They seem to seek only some means of flight.

Attack Way Cleared

Bucharest, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—A terrific day-long bombardment of Lwow, disrupting all lines of transport communication, today prepared the way for German troops to make a smashing assault upon the Polish Ukrainian capital, it was reported here tonight.

The German troop assault is expected tomorrow.

Military observers doubted that the Poles had been able to concentrate enough troops in the region of Lwow to delay for long the German entry, although the strength of the German column is unknown.

If Lwow is lost the Poles are faced with the alternative of defending their Ukraine from the direction of the Rumanian frontier, with the constant possibility of being cut off, or of retiring to the northeast, abandoning the Ukraine and its corn. This latter choice would present the Germans with the possibility of sending a motorized column through to the Rumanian border, virtually without opposition and cutting off all communications with Rumania.

Officials Reported Leaving

Budapest, Sept. 13 (AP).—Eleven Polish officials, headed by Eugene Kwiatkowski, vice premier and finance minister, were reported tonight to have crossed the southern Polish border into Rumania.

One of the party was identified as the head of the Polszka Bank (Bank of Poland).

A dispatch from Cernauti also said 14 planes landed there during the day with 48 persons from Poland, mostly members of the families of Polish commercial pilots.

Poles earlier had reported that Germans had dropped men on Polish territory by parachute in an effort to expedite the Nazi advance.

Several had been captured, they said, and told how they had been assigned to discover the positions of Polish headquarters, airports, supply stations and factories and to cut communication lines.

A picture of Warsaw under land and air bombardment "which destroyed half the city" was given over the Warsaw radio tonight by Capt. Wladyslaw Polenski, of the Polish air corps.

Slovakia that the British government "looked forward through a triumph of the principles for which we have taken up arms to a release of the Zech people from foreign domination."

And his words were underlined later by an official statement from the ministry of information which repeated that Britain and France "could only negotiate peace with a government in Germany whose word could be trusted so that there would be certainty for the future.

Won't Trust Hitler

"This could not be expected from Adolf Hitler, whose technique of brutal aggression on one non-German country after another is now obvious to all," the statement said.

Chamberlain's statement today was his second periodic review of the course of the war, a review he intends to give every week while Commons is in session. Much of it today was taken up with response of the empire with the "indomitable spirit of the Poles" in fighting the German invaders and with the "methodical advance" of the French army in the "essential and important preliminary phase" of operations in the west.

Yesterday's meeting of the Supreme War Council, he said, proved the "complete identity" of British and French views "on every point of policy and strategy which was discussed."

Chamberlain acknowledged that losses of British merchantships in the submarine campaign "undoubtedly had been somewhat serious."

"Only to Be Expected"

Nevertheless, Chamberlain said, present losses were "only what had to be expected" at a time when large numbers of British merchantmen were scattered over the oceans without protection.

They had left their ports, he said, under peace conditions, whereas the Germans had placed their submarines and supply ships in the "best strategic positions" prior to the declaration of war.

"It is not surprising," said Chamberlain, "that some of our vessels have been caught and surprised by the submarines before they were able to reach port." But he added, the convoy system is being applied immediately, whereas it was only applied during the last war in the summer of 1917, after three years of hostilities.

"As soon as it is in full working order," said Chamberlain, "I have no reason to suppose that it will prove to be less decisive than it was 20 years ago. Meanwhile, I can assure the House that submarines are being constantly attacked and successes are being achieved."

Virtually all German shipping already has been swept off the high seas, said Chamberlain.

Another piece of news which had not been officially disclosed until today was Chamberlain's statement that three Polish destroyers are with the British fleet.

These ships, largest destroyers in the world, are the equivalent of small light cruisers.

Chamberlain's statement brought repeated cheers from all sides of the house and apparently met the approval of opposition leaders.

The only major criticism of the government's war activity was on the functioning of the ministry of information, which distributes official news and administers the censorship.

Arthur Greenwood, acting leader of the Labor opposition, said the ministry's handling of the news that British troops had arrived in France was a "muddle of the worst possible kind" and an "extraordinary example of crass stupidity and vacillation."

"This is creating a situation which is undermining and will continue to undermne the confidence of the people in the government," he added.

Grenwood said the suppression and reinstatement of the story of British troops in France was "really due to one person—the secretary of state for war (Leslie Hore Belisha)."

"I say he has no right to override the ministry of information," Greenwood declared.

Hoare Apologizes for Confusion

Sir Samuel Hoare, lord privy seal, said in reply that "I admit and apologize for the confusion and the minister of information has made it his business since Monday to see that nothing of that kind ever occurs again."

He said that hereafter all three branches of the service would keep senior officers at the ministry to avoid further confusion.

Greenwood also declared there must be "no profiteering in this war" and asserted "at this moment plundering is going on upon a large scale."

He voiced the feeling that unless swift and courageous action were taken "the government might find itself faced with a crisis like the shell crisis of the last great war.

"One of the great industries of this country is the machine tool industry. That industry today is making profits which are a national crime. Steps must be taken immediately to end any possibility of this kind of crime."

Parliament Meets Today

Chamberlain announced that Parliament would meet tomorrow afternoon and again Friday morning to deal with additional emergency legislation.

During the question period before the statement was read, Chamberlain said that the government intended to establish a ministry of shipping at an early date, but that at present he believed greater efficiency would be attained by keeping shipping problems within the board of trade.

Warsaw Encircled, Resistance Ended in South, Nazis Say

By Louis Lochner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Sept. 13.—A German army report tonight said that Warsaw was completely encircled.

A dispatch from the German army in the field tonight stated German troops had surrounded the Polish fortress of Modlin at the conjunction of the Narew and Vistula rivers, less than 20 miles northwest of Warsaw.

Closing in on the Polish capital, German forces said they had wiped out resistance on another of three fronts defending the city.

A high command communique declared "enormous numbers" of prisoners were captured in a battle ending Polish resistance south of Radom, about 60 miles south of Warsaw.

Although the army report did not elaborate on Warsaw's encirclement, two German forces, one advancing from the south and one from the north, previously had reported they crossed the Siedlce rail line due east of Warsaw. Other German forces are pressing on Warsaw from the north and west.

Swiftly moving German motorized units, closing in on Lwow, were reported to have reached the main highway connecting the city, Poland's second largest, with Lublin 100 miles to the north.

Both cities are the objectives of hard German drives. The Germans said they had gained the road at Rawa Ruska and at Tomaszow.

The vanguard of German forces in south Poland was reported at Lwow, 220 miles southeast of the capital, in a drive to cut Poland's contact with Rumania.

Germany apparently was attempting to prepare foreign opinion for aerial bombardment and artillery shelling of Warsaw on the grounds that it no longer is an open, or unfortified, city.

Newspapermen of neutral nations had read to them tonight excerpts from a purported British radio announcement that Warsaw's civilian population was being enlisted for the city's defense.

An authoritative source said the implications should be obvious in view of an announcement earlier today from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters that the German army will break Polish resistance in open towns and villages "with all means at its disposal." The Polish government was accused of encouraging Poles to resort to sniping.

(In London Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax gave warning that the British consider themselves "completely free to take such action as they may deem appropriate" if Nazi planes are turned loose indiscriminately on Polish civilians.)

German leaders expressed belief the fall of Warsaw was imminent although they also professed surprise at the strength of Polish resistance to the invasion which started September 1.

In addition to the Warsaw and Radom forces, one mainstay of Polish defenses has been five divisions and two cavalry brigades who are in a pocket north of Lodz. Their stubborn resistance continued in the third day, but Germans said they were closing in slowly.

The air force was said to have proved effective in destroying Polish airdromes and communications lines during the day's fighting.

Germany reported little of importance on the western front, but said German troops had recaptured Birnberg (Birn Hill) four miles southeast of Saarbrucken.

Paralleling military operations were German diplomatic efforts to support Premier Mussolini's reported peace efforts and to persuade neutral nations that they must insist on their rights to trade with warring parties.

Officials reported Italian Ambassador Bernardo Attolico, whose car was outside the foreign ministry yesterday, was back "in Italy." The official attitude indicated he had been charged with an important mission.

Turning to administration of newly conquered territory, the news service reported that Arthur Greiser, president of the Danzig German Senate before Germany annexed the free city, would head the civil administration of Poznan, the western Polish province which has had its German name of Posen restored.

Nazis Bombed Open Village, Biddle Charges

Ambassador Declares Projectiles Dropped Within Feet of Embassy

By the Associated Press

Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., reported from Poland yesterday that German planes had bombed "a defenseless open village where the Polish foreign office and the American Embassy are located.

The State Department made public the report together with an earlier one in which the Ambassador expressed the "opinion the German forces are taking advantage of every (bombing) opportunity without regard to the danger to the civilian population which may be involved."

Biddle said that was his conclusion "although they are ostensibly appearing to follow the principle of limiting bombardments from the air to objectives of a military character."

The State Department withheld the name of the village where the American Embassy and the Polish foreign office are located, but it was presumed to be in extreme southeastern Poland.

Twelve Bombs Dropped

The Ambassador reported that the place "was bombed at 11 a. m. today by flight of four German planes which dropped at least 12 bombs not only on outskirts, but also along Main street, 300 yards from this embassy and within even closer proximity of other missions as well as the Polish foreign office.

"Verified casualties," his dispatch continued, "include 11 killed, 40 seriously injured and many business properties damaged. Population terrorized by suddenness and unexpectedness of raid."

The first telegram, dated September 8, added, "it is also evident that the German bombers are releasing the bombs they carry even when they are in doubt as to the identity of their objectives."

Biddle cited a number of instances:

"The attacks made on my villa and that of my neighbor; a heavy attack on modern apartment buildings in the suburbs of Warsaw, situated one kilometer from military barracks; the destruction of a sanitorium, involving the death of ten children, in the woods near Otwock; the bombing of a refugee train on its way from Kutno; damage done to a hospital train carrying a party of wounded soldiers, which was plainly marked with a red cross on the roof and drawn up at the uncovered east station of Warsaw, and the destruction of a girl guide hut in which 12 girls were killed."

It was recalled here that President Roosevelt, immediately on the outbreak of German-Polish hostilities, addressed an appeal to all likely belligerents, urging them not to bomb civilian populations, and favorable replies were received from all.

Industries Bombed

Biddle said Germans were bombing military objectives extensively.

"Aerial bombardments by German aviation," he said, "definitely include industrial establishments which are engaged in war production (the bombardment of which endangers surrounding communities); railroads (the bombardment of which frequently endangers hospital and refugee trains); bridges, and the general public crossing them, and populations residing near bridges, airports and troop centers throughout the country. (The Polish army in making its defensive retreat is billeting military forces in civilian communities, there being hardly any community that does not house some troops. In addition, there are barracks in practically every smaller center and in all cities.)"

War to Curtail Navy Day Fete

Because of the neutrality enforcement program and anti-espionage campaign, the celebration of Navy Day this year will be greatly curtailed, officials asserted yesterday.

Since 1922, the Navy has observed every October 27, birthday of Theodore Roosevelt, with the Nation's sea forces holding "open house." This year, however, Navy yards will not be thrown open to the public, nor will the usual custom of sending ships to seaboard cities be followed, it is said.

Squalus Lifted Twice in Day, Towed to Port

Stern Sinks on First Raising and Craft Is Lowered to Correct List

By the Associated Press

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 13.—The United States Navy's dogged crew of salvage workers, nearing completion of a grueling 113-day task, entered the harbor tonight with the long-sunken submarine Squalus in tow after triumphing over one mishap which threatened to prolong their job.

The Squalus' hull still held the bodies of her 26 dead as she came in here to climax a grueling salvage task seldom paralleled in the Navy's history. Removal of the bodies of the crew awaited raising the Squalus above the level of her hatches and pumping additional water from her hull.

That work was deferred temporarily when the craft grounded, her bow a short 25 feet from the wharf. Salvage workers made her fast with huge hawsers and expected the rising tide to permit berthing the submarine.

A "13 jinx," pursuing the craft, reappeared today and forced the weary workers to lift the craft twice within ten hours before they could begin the ticklish task of towing her to drydock.

Only a few hours after daybreak, pumps and pontoons tugged the submarine's conning tower and superstructure into the sunlight for the first time.

But cheers as she came up ebbed to near tears. With a 40-degree list to starboard. Tons of water inside the craft rolled aft, causing the stern to sink. The bow was lowered then by admitting water to pontoons to give experts an opportunity to correct the list.

The salvage workers at once began a second—and this time successful—attempt to bring up the Squalus. After five hours of careful work, the second lift was completed and she floated, partly through buoyancy of supporting pontoons and partly through air pumped into her hull. Towing operations began at once.

The Squalus sank in 240 feet of water last May 23. Just two months ago—on July 13—the Navy met its first disappointment. The Squalus' bow broke free, and she sank in a mass of tangled gear which required a month to straighten before a new attempt.

Even conservative black enriches itself with lustrous brown—but wine, green, dahlia (a lovely plum purple) and brown with brown fur, are more festive indications that this is a changing world. Many in the collection are one-of-a-kind. We illustrate:

A—Ensembled full-length coat and dress in green or dahlia Botany woolen. The frock top's opulent rayon brocade is highlighted by a sunburst pin. And London-dyed squirrel adds further lustre $89.75

B—Lush green or brown woolen is ideal background for London-dyed squirrel in this three-quarter length coat. Lined with the same heavily blistered rayon crepe that makes the frock top. This same frock top is handsomely detailed—especially at its high-low waistline $150

Reason for Advances In Poland Are Set Forth by Writer

By Joseph Barnes.

Copyright, 1939, by N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

With the German Army in Poland, Sept. 12 (Delayed).—Behind the German lines in western Poland the reasons for Germany's spectacular success are no secret. They are all over the landscape. The harried Polish army, trying desperately to reform a front against the invaders, is deployed tonight as if in an exercise in the new German text book of mechanized "lightning war."

The German army's advance began ten days ago in long steel fingers, cutting into Poland like surgeons' scalpels. Most of these lines were no wider than a single Polish highway. The invaders have moved fast over the hard-baked crust of Poland—where luck has decreed no rain for a month—under a German air force which has had a solid week of full moons by which to aim its bombs.

Odds on Nazi Side

By tonight these sharp scalpels have cut well beyond the Vistula. The Germans are trying to close their ends and thus pocket most of the Polish army in small units. The Poles are trying to break through the closing fingertips of this German hand, laid down across Poland, hoping to form a new front east of the Vistula. The odds are heavy on the German side.

The Germans are where they are tonight, thanks to gasoline. In two days' driving through the war area, this correspondent has not seen a single company of infantry marching anywhere on foot. Instead, there are endless lines of trucks, tanks, mounted guns, and motorized field kitchens moving up each road in one lane while the other lane carries empty trucks, prisoners and ambulances in an equally unbroken line back. With mechanized war, the Germans have cut ribbons of steel into the wilderness of Polish farmlands.

Against this advance, the Polish strategy was—to use the word of German staff officer here—"suicidal." Polish soldiers have fought desperately when they had a chance and civilians are—according to the German claim—still fighting far behind the front lines.

Failed to Withdraw

But the Polish high command failed to withdraw and form a front behind its woefully inadequate first defense line. For a few days, small units tried to hold out in stone houses along the frontier. By now the only Polish strategy seems to be a futile effort to march east faster than the German trucks can drive, in the hope of making a stand again beyond Warsaw.

To this strategic failure was added inability of the Poles to impede the German advance. During the last two days we have driven over dozens of Polish rivers and streams—each time on improvised bridges which the Germans have quickly laid down on top of those damaged by the Poles. The roads are blocked only by occasional bomb holes—as many made by Germans as by Polish bombs. There are apparently no Polish defenses against tanks and no effective measures to mine the roads or do more than spring the bridges out of place.

Finally, there is evidence all around us here of the devastating German use of airplanes. Polish antiaircraft defense apparently existed only on the frontier and there in wholly inadequate degree. Planes still roar over the woods around us here mopping up small Polish units. Even within a few miles of the front lines beyond Konskie, German officers told us they have not seen any Polish planes for days.

The immensity of the co-ordination of the German preparation for this advance is spelled out along the Polish roads. It is war of old-fashioned maneuvers being fought with the most new-fashioned weapons. Between the roads and between the villages, which are tied together by the roads, everything is still as it was a month ago. There are almost no trenches and no barbed wire. There are no concrete fortifications. Only the burned-out towns and villages, the swarming hordes of refugees and the endless chain of German motor units show the steel skeleton of this modern war.

Across the German frontier for miles deep into Germany the same blueprint is spread on the land—in less sinister terms than in Poland. There are potato fields, for example, in which dummy wooden airplanes have been placed to fool the Polish bombers which never arrived. Field tank obstacles were ready for tanks which never came. Gasoline depots were hidden in the woods and truck loads of labor service men were waiting for the soldiers to get out of their way.

In Lodz last night the Germans were ready with posters in German and Polish to be pasted on top of the pictures of Marshal Smigly-Rydz with which the Polish city was decorated. German soldiers stepped right into traffic control and kept even the street cars running.

Troops kept crowds moving during the day, the amazingly young and pleasant German soldiers often looking as embarassed and dazed as the milling Polish throng.

Jews Put to Work

Jews were rounded up into labor gangs by yesterday, the first day after the German occupation of the city. One of their first jobs was to push back dirt into street excavations—many of them with their hands—because the excavations interfered with troop movements.

the general with a bouquet of garden flowers.

"Thank you very much," the general said, and then to the delight of the cameramen he leaned over and kissed her.

Overwhelmed With Greetings

In the course of the day, Gen. Pershing was overwhelmed with birthday greetings. One old comrade-in-arms called to deliver his in person. This was Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, U. S. A., retired, who went to France with Pershing on the Baltic, served as his chief-of-staff at Chaumont, and then led the Marine Brigade to its glorious victory at Belleau Wood.

First caller of the day was Sergt. Jesse W. Snyder, artilleryman of Fort Myer, a veteran of 26 years service. He felicitated Gen. Pershing on behalf of the officers and men of the Army. Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, and Gen. George C. Marshall and all members of the general staff sent greetings, and expressed gratitude that the A. E. F. leader maintained a vigorous interest in the national defense and was available for wise counsel.

Gen. Pershing's statement urging an enlarged Army was issued by Col. George E. Adamson, his military secretary, who has been with him since the Mexican border campaign of 1916.

"It is not a very good time to be celebrating birthdays when everybody is disturbed about the unfortunate situation in the world today," the statement said. "My information of the military situation at home and abroad is largely that common to the general public, which is, I believe, about as well informed regarding the daily progress of the tragic events in Europe as the Government officials, thanks to the press and radio.

"The recent action of President Roosevelt in authorizing an immediate increase in the strength of the Army and Navy has my hearty support. I feel that this is especially necessary in the case of the Army, which had been reduced since 1921, so far as ground forces were concerned, to a mere skeleton of the peace establishment authorized by Congress in the national defense act of 1920.

"I sincerely hope that if a special session of Congress is called the War Department will be at once authorized, and provided with the necessary funds, to carry the military establishment to its full peace strength, and that there will be a generous appropriation of funds to permit early concentrations of large units of the Regular Army, so that leaders and troops may have the benefits of intensive and prolonged field training with the combined arms."

Gen. Pershing expressed the same hopes for the National Guard. Fortunately, he said, there is available a large group of trained officers, some of them with war-time experience, others a product of the R. O. T. C. and G. M. T. C. After praising the Army general staff, which he reorganized following the World War, he concluded;

"Finally, I must again recall our deplorable situation when we entered the World War, 22 years ago. Then not a single move had been made, from a military point of view, to prepare for it. That experience, with its costly lesson, I am happy to say appears certain to be avoided in the event that we should again become involved in war."

to have been repulsed by fire from the Maginot forts around Sierck at the extreme northern tip of the French-German frontier, was Germany's first initiative on the front.

"The Germans were thrown back to Reich territory and not an inch of French territory is in the hands of the enemy," the Petit Parisien said.

Tonight's war office communique, No. 20, said:

"Our troops as a whole improved their positions taken in the course of preceding days. Our naval forces reacted vigorously against enemy submarines. Aerial activity was reduced on account of bad weather."

The fighting on the northern 90-mile crook of the Western Front between the Rhine and Moselle rivers became a war of the fortresses as howitzers of Germany's Siegfried Line and France's Maginot forts staged a day-long duel.

The French guns hammered at the German fortifications in preparation for a large-scale assault on the first band of the Siegfried Line, trying to blast a path for an offensive.

German guns to the rear of Saarbruecken, already evacuated of its 130,000 civilians, pounded the city to prevent the French from occupying it from dominating positions on hills to the south.

The French have cut off all eight roads from Saarbruecken, it was reported.

Reports said French forces now were planted firmly on the west banks of the Saar River from Saarlautern, past Volklingen and Saarbruecken to Bubingen, a stretch of between 25 and 30 miles.

All the French operations of the day, like those of preceding days, were designed to straighten the French lines in the no-man's land between the two fortified lines and achieve better strategic positions for the offensive against Germany's west wall, which is expected imminently.

In today's aerial fighting, mentioned in a 10:45 a. m. war office communique, British planes co-operated with the French.

In the Saar Basin, it was reported, the French advance guard action has been so successful that large-scale operations against "selected points" of the German west wall may be expected in the near future.

The defending German forces were said to be holding two lines of defense to the north of the Saar, the first being a thin band of recently completed pillboxes, spiked tank barriers and barbed wire entanglements on wooded heights not far across the rivers.

These first line barriers were said to have been built within the past 15 months by German labor battalions and, until late August, concrete still was being poured, according to French military information.

The second line of German fortifications—the main Siegfried Line begun before the Saar was returned to Germany by plebiscite in 1935—runs from Karlsruhe past Kaiserslautern and between Saint Wendel and Kunsel behind Saar province to Trier in the Moselle Valley to the west.

French military observers contend that this second line still is not entirely completed, but admit that it will be able to resist strong attack.

will be made some of the points of the peace treaty.

"It is necessary that international relations should be henceforth put beyond the reach of intimidation and of brutal recourse to force," declares Le Temps.

Daladier today paid a tribute to the British statesmen whom he met at the supreme war council on French soil yesterday, saying that he had found in them "a spirit of firm resolution to carry on the war to a definitive victory." No defection in either country would halt the two nations in the struggle they have embarked upon against Germany, Daladier said.

Only four figures were dropped from the old cabinet. All resigned voluntarily, it was announced. Daladier explained that he preferred to keep as many of the men who had collaborated with him for 18 months as he could because the conditions of war demand as much continuity and unity as is possible.

The new cabinet's membership shows that Daladier, in effect, has set up an inner cabinet composed of himself, Minister of Finance Paul Reynaud, Navy Minister Cesar Campinchi, Vice Premier Camille Chautemps and Minister of Interior Albert Sarraut.

Alien Defense Chiefs Confer At Shanghai

By Hallett Abend

Copyright by New York Times.

Shanghai (Thursday), Sept. 14.—Tension was heightened in Shanghai this morning when it became known that the heads of all the city's foreign defense forces were holding a special conference at 10:30 o'clock.

The Japanese naval and military high command will meet at the Japanese naval landing headquarters. It is conjectured that the Japanese military will present new demands, possibly coupled with a time limit, for disarming or departure of British and French forces from the settlement concession.

The situation has reached such gravity that Admiral Hart, on the U. S. S. Augusta, is making a special trip from North China waters to Shanghai, arriving at dawn tomorrow. At present the only sizeable American naval unit here is the cruiser Marblehead.

Guarantee Offered

It has just been revealed that when the Japanese first proposed, through diplomatic representatives, the withdrawal of British and French forces from Shanghai they offered to guarantee the inviolability of defense sectors around the foreign areas, even though they were manned only by policemen.

Difficulty arises from the fact that past experiences have often proved that the promises of the government are later flouted by the military.

[Observers charged Japan was seeking to take advantage of European troubles to gain greater control of Shanghai's foreign areas, although avoiding antogonizing the United States, the Associated Press said.

[It was understood authoritatively the Japanese were proposing that the British hand over their defense sector jointly to the United States Marines and the Japanese army.—Editor's note.]

Coup by Mob Rumored

The city has been progressively nervous and apprehensive. Rumor mongers have even set Saturday as the day chosen for a coup, when an anticipated mob of 50,000 Chinese, hired by the Japanese, are due to parade in a demonstration against the continuance of the settlement concession.

A recent dangerous element lies in the fact that the Japanese-sponsored municipal government continues to encroach upon foreign settlement roads, taking over the policing powers of those streets and highways which have been controlled by the settlement hitherto.

Vigorous protests have been made regarding this encroachment. The interested powers termed the majority of the Japanese-sponsored policemen only armed ruffians and riffraff with the object of creating a new area of "badlands."

Such conditions are held to be a menace to the lives and property of hundreds of American, British and other foreign families residing in the settlement.

Canada Ends War Session Of Parliament

No Need Now for National Government, Prime Minister Hints

By John MacCormac.
Copyright by New York Times.

Ottawa, Ontario, Sept. 13.—Canada's war parliament was prorogued today after arming the government with powers it needs to carry on the war until the next Parliament in January. It closed with a strong hint from Prime Minister King that he could see no immediate need for a national government.

The emergency session lasted five and a half days, a half day more than the special session of 1914. It did more business than in 1914 because it had the experience of the great war to build on. A week before the 1914 Parliament met Sir Robert Borden had promised a Canadian expeditionary force to Britain. Prime Minister King has made no such promise, but there are few Canadians who think Canada can avoid making good on the battlefields of France or Germany her promise of "effective co-operation."

A good deal depends on how Prime Minister King's liberal administration conducts Canada's part in the war in the next few months and how the war goes. Whether the demand for national government, coming from several quarters, can be resisted will depend upon the extent to which King's ministry is able to convince the country that it is prosecuting the war with vigor and a minimum of partisanship. A vital test will be the appointment of a minister to Washington to succeed Sir Herbert Marler. With the renewal of President Roosevelt's pledge to safeguard Canadian territory against European aggression this post becomes one of the key positions.

Before Parliament meets again, it is believed the Canadian government will have decided to dispatch an expeditionary force.

Senator W. A. Briesbach, a war veteran, urged that the government institute a propaganda campaign "to sell military service," on the ground voluntary recruiting already showed signs of falling off.

Both the government and the Conservative opposition are committed against conscription for overseas service, the need for which was urged by Griesbach. The only party which has committed itself to it is the Social Credit faction, recently absorbed by W. D. Herrige's new Democracy Party.

"I thank you in the name of His Majesty the King," declared Gov. Gen. Lord Tweedsmuir, "for the manner in which you have responded to the demands of this critical time . . . In providing voluntarily for effective co-operation by Canada at the side of Britain and France in a war to resist aggression, you have made a momentous decision," he told Parliament.

Action Explained

Germany's action in publishing a contraband list means that she will try to prevent the ships of neutral nations from carrying the enumerated goods to her foes. It was pointed out here that under international law, a German warship could stop an American merchantman carrying absolute contraband to Great Britain, for instance, and take the ship as its prize.

However, the view was expressed that the American ship could not legally be sunk, except under extreme circumstances. If she were carry arms to belligerents (a violation of the American neutrality law) or if her captor found she was carrying contraband but was unable to send her to port as a prize, she could be sunk, but only after definite steps were taken to safeguard the lives of passengers and crew.

A State Department official said tonight that Germany's contraband list would be included in the study now going on at the State Department to determine America's position with regard to contraband, blockade, stopping of American ships and various other problems likely to rise in the next few months.

tinuing their normal exports, even to such countries as are in conflict with Germany.

"Fourth, she would regard as incompatible with economic neutrality any limitation or formal control which neutrals might permit other states to force on them.

"Fifth, Germany is ready to enter into negotiations looking toward bilateral agreements with neutral countries to adjust the normal exchange of goods in the new circumstances which have arisen."

Arms Use Prohibited

The introduction of the law pointed out that in German regulations issued August 28, "only those objects and materials destined for enemy territory or enemy forces are declared unconditional contraband which directly serve land, sea or air armament.

"Because the British government, however, set up a list of unconditional contraband which goes far beyond this sphere, the Reich's government sees itself forced likewise to enlarge its scope of unconditional contraband."

As a result, the law said the definition of contraband was broadened by the present act.

At the same time notice was issued defining goods which the German government now regards as "conditional contraband."

Listed are all foodstuffs, including live animals; feed, clothes and objects and materials used for their manufacture.

Contraband Is Listed

The German list of "unconditional contraband" goods, effective immediately, if intended for enemy territory or enemy forces, follows:

Weapons of all kinds, their parts or accessories; munitions and munitions parts, bombs, torpedoes, mines and other kinds of shells; contrivances for shooting such shells, powder explosives, including igniting materials, and explosive caps.

All types of warships, their parts or accessories; war trucks of all kinds, their parts or accessories; airplane motors, armor plate of all kinds, armored trains, automobiles and tanks.

Chemical battle materials and apparatus or machines used to throw or blow such chemicals; military uniforms and equipment, signal communication and military lighting mediums together with their apparatus.

Transport and communication equipment and parts; horses for riding and pulling loads; lubricants, fuel of all kinds; gold, silver, currency and debt documents; tools, instruments, machines and materials used to make or to use the above named products or objects.

U. S. Ships Released

London, Sept. 13 (AP).—The British information ministry disclosed tonight the American steamship Black Osprey was taken into Weymouth September 6, but was allowed to proceed after its cargo was examined for contraband.

How long the Black Osprey was delayed was not disclosed.

This was the first American ship stopped and searched for contraband. Later the ministry announced the cargo of the Dutch steamer, Groenlo, had been seized September 4 as contraband. The cargo, consigned to Dusseldorf, Germany, will be sold as a prize of war and the ship will be released.

Duce Biding Time to State War Position

Italians Expect Revision of Policy When Nazis Triumph

By Camille M. Cinafarra.
Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Sept. 13.—The aims of the Italian policy regarding the European conflict will be made known by Premier Mussolini, according to editorials today, which, however, do not specify when the new pronouncement will be forthcoming.

Some circles believe that no new development must be expected until the German-Polish war has entered its decisive phase.

Italians say that once Germany has conquered Poland—there is no doubt here of this ultimate outcome of the war, which is generally expected to end shortly—a new situation will be created that will necessitate an adjustment of Italian policy.

Until then, writes Virginio Gayda in today's Giornale di Italia, all speculations are futile.

"The Italian position will be gradually defined by a will, uniquely Italian," he says, thus making it clear that Italy will brook no interference from other powers.

The present war, he adds, does not involve any direct Italian interests but creates many problems which are "linked with the essential Italian interests."

Gayda's statement came after repeated conferences of British and French ambassadors with Foreign Minister Ciano had quickened speculation on the course Italy would take.

At the same time, authoritative Italians said Italian neutrality could be expected to continue for some time. They said careful examination of events since last spring would indicate Mussolini did not approve of Fuehrer Hitler's resort to force to get Danzig and the Polish Corridor.

Indeed, Mussolini is directing life in this country as if there were no war. He received today the commissioner general of the universal exhibition scheduled to open in 1942.

"He gave instructions so that work now in progress will proceed normally to insure completion of the prearranged program within the time already allotted," says a communique.

Italy's Dilemma

There are many uneasy and uncertain neutrals in the present war, but none more uneasy and uncertain than Italy.

Technically, Italy is still Germany's ally. For the time being she is released from the obligations incumbent upon her under the Italo-German pact to render military aid to the Third Reich whenever the latter demands it. But there is no certainty that Hitler will be content to let Italy remain neutral indefinitely. Should the war go against Germany, he is certain to put pressure on Italy to join in the fight against Great Britain and France.

If affairs come to that pass, it may prove difficult for Mussolini to give a negative answer to the importunings of the Fuehrer. Aside from treaty obligations, there is the dangerous circumstance that Germany is on the other side of the Brenner and in uncomfortably close proximity to Trieste and the Adriatic. On the other hand, if a German triumph seems assured, the Duce may be under temptation to jump on the German bandwagon and be around when the fruits of victory are being distributed.

But just as Germany is in a position to press down on the Italian peninsula from the north, France is in a position to do so from the west. The Valley of the Po, Italy's industrial heart, is on the other side of France's Alpine passes. Moreover, as a Mediterranean power Italy must also take into account the fact that an Anglo-French naval blockade could quickly reduce her to starvation.

So far as the Allies are concerned, they would undoubtedly prefer to have Italy on their side, as she was from 1915 to 1918, rather than in the enemy camp. If Italy will not be their ally, they would prefer to have her remain neutral. To be sure, Italian neutrality compels them to attack Germany at her least vulnerable point—the Siegfried Line, rather than via the easier route of the Brenner. But Italian neutrality does tend to make it easier for Hungary and the Balkan states to remain neutral, too, instead of being dragged along, willy-nilly, by the Nazi chariot.

The question which the Allies are today asking themselves, and to which they cannot yet give a satisfactory answer, is whether Italian neutrality is genuine and permanent or only temporary and deceptive. If the former, the Allies will probably accept it as a reality less unpleasant than Italian hostility. If the latter, Italy will bear considerable watching. The Allies certainly cannot afford to permit the Italian kingdom to nullify the Allied blockade of the Third Reich or to build itself up militarily to the point where it might, at a critical juncture in the war, render formidable aid to Germany. Thus the Italian problem is certain to give the London and Paris governments a great many headaches.

In the meantime, Italy is in a position to reap a golden harvest while the sun of neutrality continues to shine. And no doubt that is what the overwhelming majority of Italians favor. They have been called upon to fight two expensive wars in the course of the last four years. They do not want war now. In particular, they have little inclination to pull Hitler's chestnuts out of the fire. But they may have little to say of what Italy's course shall be during the fearful weeks and months that lie ahead.

Training Pilots

One of the serious problems which the belligerent nations face in bringing their air forces up to the proper degree of fighting capacity is the shortage of trained pilots.

Both Great Britain and France, which lagged seriously behind Germany in airplane production, have begun to catch up. But increase in production of machines is not enough. There is an equal need of men to fly the planes. And their training can neither be improvised nor speeded up to an emergency tempo without danger of heavy losses.

The United States is, happily, not at war. But Americans have come to recognize the air force as an indispensable part of our defense system. For that reason the participation of 166 colleges and universities in the civilian pilot training program now to be put into effect is a wholly desirable development.

Approximately 11,000 students will, during the coming school year, be given 72 hours of ground school instruction and between 35 to 50 hours of flight training. These students will not be fully trained pilots when they finish this course. But at least they will form a reserve available for further training.

Recalling The Aftermath

On a number of occasions Secretary Wallace has emphasized the danger of assuming that the soaring agricultural prices which followed the outbreak of war in 1914 will be duplicated in this war. He has pointed out, for instance, that in 1914 foreign supplies of various agricultural products—notably wheat—were scarce, whereas today European countries are not only growing increased quantities of grain, but have built up emergency stocks in preparation for war.

The present world wheat carryover, moreover, is the largest in history. The cotton trade is likewise faced with record-breaking supplies of raw cotton. Our own Government owns outright or holds under loan about 11,000,000 bales of cotton as well as considerable supplies of wheat and corn which could be released as prices rise.

The world output of sugar also is currently over 50 per cent higher than it was in 1914, and the carryover is large and well distributed. The President's prompt action in lifting import quotas under the sugar control plan to relieve the temporary shortage created by a domestic buying stampede should act as an effective deterrent to sharp price increases. Certainly it is a sobering reminder that the speculator today has to take account of a good many factors that did not concern him a quarter of a century ago.

However, despite the profound differences between the economic situation in 1914 and 1939, a prolonged war may absorb surpluses of many important agricultural commodities and raw materials at a surprisingly rapid rate. Even for the short run, war may raise prices of many commodities when there is no absolute shortage of world supplies. For foreign goods may be cut off by inadequate shipping facilities, inducing local shortages of supply. Transport costs also increase and insurance charges rise.

Knowing all these obstacles to normal trading, not only speculators but manufacturers are disposed to buy in anticipation of rising prices and, in so doing, they hasten advances. Currently, moreover, prices have advanced as the result of a desire to build up inventories which have been kept low by hand-to-mouth buying policies.

Reasonable advances in price resulting from such causes are justified and are not an occasion for alarm. What this country has to fear is the uncontrolled boosting of prices which would ultimately lead to disastrous deflation and costly readjustments of our agricultural and industrial operations to a more normal peacetime existence. We have not yet forgotten, it is to be hoped, the havoc wrought by the last wartime boom that raised our wheat, corn and cotton prices to fantastic levels.

The disastrous aftermath of that boom was not realized at first—not even when agricultural prices collapsed. The war also left us with the area of cultivated land enlarged beyond the requirements of a peacetime economy, with land values inflated, and with mortgage indebtedness correspondingly excessive. We are still struggling—so far without success—to correct the agricultural maladjustments produced by the last war and aggravated by the industrial collapse which came later and was itself in good part a result of changed conditions brought about by the war.

It would be a major tragedy if this country were to experience again the kind of war boom that raised wheat to a minimum of $2.25 per bushel, caused corn to soar to $1.75 per bushel, and lifted cotton to 40 cents per pound. The process of adjusting ourselves to a peacetime economy under such conditions would be even more painful than it was after the last world war. For today the world is less dependent upon us for foodstuffs and raw materials.

Our price-raising policies have diverted demand elsewhere, and, in the case of cotton, permanently deprived us of important export outlets. Furthermore, the totalitarian states of Europe and other countries, too, are obsessed by the desire to become economically self-sufficient. They have made great strides in that direction, by carrying on a more intensive agriculture and devising substitutes for imported raw materials.

Hence, even assuming that war of any duration would revive the demand for our products at high prices, the end of the war would, no doubt, find that demand disappearing abruptly beyond hope of recapture, leaving us in a worse predicament than we were in the early twenties, when ideals of self-sufficiency were in a germinal stage.

It may seem to be borrowing trouble unnecessarily to envisage the prospect of an agricultural boom comparable to that of the last war. But the possibility exists and should be taken into account while there is time to guard against its development.

The Special Session

In summoning Congress to meet in special session next week, President Roosevelt is pursuing the right and proper course.

When Congress adjourned early last month, it left hanging the question of amending the neutrality act whose revision the Administration favored, as did also an increasingly large body of American public opinion. The result is that with a war of major dimensions now raging in Europe, the United States finds itself in an invidious and potentially dangerous position. The mandatory embargo on arms, munitions and implements of war to all belligerents affects adversely only those belligerents that have control of the seas, namely Great Britain and France. Because it does so it works to the undoubted advantage of Germany.

In his proclamation calling a special session, President Roosevelt did not state the purpose of this meeting other than to declare that an "extraordinary occasion" has arisen which requires the presence of Congress. It is no secret, however, that the primary problem upon which Congress will be called to act upon is that of revision of the neutrality law.

There is every reason why this question should be freely and fully debated. It would not be to the national interest, however, to have this vital question made a matter of partisan politics or have its determination become the victim of obstructionist tactics. In this connection it is a happy augury that the President has requested leaders of both parties to meet with him the day prior to the convening of Congress to discuss the whole situation.

Possibly there are other matters besides neutrality which require action by Congress at this time. Such questions should be restricted to those whose postponement to the regular session beginning next January cannot be deferred. In this particular, as in all other matters arising out of the world emergency as it affects the United States, the fullest degree of co-operation between the President and Congress is called for.

Poland's Gallant Fight

No army in modern times has had to stand the terrific punishment which has been meted out to the Polish legions by the invading hosts of the Third Reich in the fortnight since hostilities began. And no army has put up a braver fight.

Outclassed and outnumbered in the air and suffering from a decided inferiority in materiel, the Poles were at a hopeless disadvantage when the war began. Within two or three days the Corridor was cut; Krakow fell in five and within a week after the Nazi steamroller had begun its relentless march, Warsaw was in peril.

In his speech of last Saturday, Gen. Goering indicated that he believed the fall of Warsaw was only a matter of hours. Yet 13 days after the outbreak of the war, the Polish capital was still in Polish hands. The miracle of Madrid is being re-enacted, if temporarily, on the banks of the Vistula. And while a third of Poland, including some of the principal industrial areas, are in enemy hands, the war in the east is not over. The Polish army is still largely intact. And despite the destruction and devastation caused by the invaders, and the tremendous accumulation of force which they have hurled against the Poles, the latter now appear to be standing their ground.

How much longer they can do so is problematical. If, as is reported, the rains are beginning to fall on central Poland, that doughtiest of all allies, Gen. Mud, may come to Poland's assistance by miring down the German tanks and heavy artillery and giving the famed Polish cavalry a chance to operate against the enemy.

Even more helpful to the Poles would be the diversion of German strength to the west as the result of an Allied offensive. But that appears unlikely at the moment. For some time the Poles will probably have to continue to bear the brunt of the German assault. The courage and pertinacity they have displayed suggests, however, that the victory which Hitler anticipated and which Goering has already proclaimed may not be as easy or come as soon as they expect.

Hot-Diggity

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Taking the temperature of the fingers is a new method of gauging emotions, just announced by two New York physicians at a scientific meeting at Palo Alto, Calif. Tension, anxiety and conflict reduce the temperature by as much as 23 degrees in an hour, it is said. Anger, fear, depression and elation produce a lesser cooling, while thoughts of love and marriage send the Fahrenheit upward.

All this may be very scientific, and may even revolutionize the processes of psychological diagnosis. But it also suggests a new technique for amorous young men to adopt with a bashful subject toward the objective of holding hands in the moonlight.

Not Over War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President now asks us to be neutral, due to the perilous times. To accomplish this the Administration needs must drop the constant talk of war and national emergency and thus reassure the people. This is not our war, despite the fact that we are being educated to believe that it is. The Administration had no such war jitters during the Spanish, Ethiopian and Chinese wars.

The people themselves do not want to fight, nor to have the threat of involvement constantly before them. For this reason alone, instead of being non-partisan, they will before long be seriously concentrating on a really conservative non-interventionis Administration rather than an alarmist New Deal regime.

E. RUSSELL.

Which If Any

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Before Congress decides to appropriate money for the construction of the proposed Nicaraguan canal, it should look carefully into the matter, also into the suggestion advanced by some that a canal across southern Mexico would be cheaper and shorter. I strongly urge that no hasty action be taken and that the two propositions be looked into.

I am not indorsing either plan, but I submit the suggestion that too much money is involved and the matter is too vital to the defense of the United States for a hasty decision to be made. True, the Nicaraguan canal idea has been effectively press agented, but that should not cause us to swallow it hook, line and sinker. Let us proceed cautiously and make sure we know what we are doing before we take official action.

What Can Be Said?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What can be said of a Senator, a candidate for the Presidency, who could accuse the President of manufacturing a "war scare," and who could insist that the war situation in Europe was "ballyhoo," when the most competent observers available were declaring that the possibility of a war was very real?

What can be said of a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who could vote against the repeal of the neutrality act because, he said, he had information on the European situation which was superior to that available to the President, which indicated that war was improbable? If a Senator should have access to information that is more reliable than that available to the President, is it not a public duty, especially in time of grave crisis, to make this information available to the President? And events have proved that the Senator's source of information was not at all reliable, yet the gravest of decisions was made upon the strength of it?

What Wilson Really Said

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A distinguished band of writers speak of President Wilson as urging the people to be "neutral in thought." That is utterly incorrect. Wilson did not say that. What he really said was: "Neutral in fact as well in name," "impartial in thought as well as in action," which is very different.

The correction of the misquotation is not a mere quibble about refinements of language. Indeed, what Wilson said in his early appeal to the people is of little consequence today. It is now useful mainly—misquoted—as a slogan for those who are most opposed to the big things for which Wilson stood. The real trouble with the misquotation is that it tends to foster a wrong and pernicious conception of neutrality. It confuses neutrality with impartiality. It suggests that there is something moral in being neutral—that it is our duty.

Now it is immoral to be partial, which is to be unjust. But neutrality is really a sort of business arrangement; the belligerent says to the neutral: "If you will agree not to interfere with my fighting, I will not let my fighting interfere with you—at least to a certain extent." The dictionary definition of neutral is "indifferent." And there are plenty of occasions in the life of the individual where indifference is not only not moral, but may be positively wicked.

A practical point is given to these elementary consideration by the lengthy radio address of Senator Walsh on "Preparedness, Peace, and Propaganda," the high light of which was the defense of the present embargo on munitions to belligerents. This defense rests, first of all, on the notion of neutrality as synonymous with impartiality, and therefore a moral duty. Thus, he says: "Furnishing one side with the deadly weapons of war is the most definite sort of favoritism, the rankest unneutrality." He also speaks of our embargo as the only "genuine neutrality," which is a contradiction of all the history of international law. No such embargo has ever been in a major war. Even worse is his statement: "Any war which might follow by furnishing arms and munitions to one set of European belligerents and denying them to another." The lack of embargo would not deny them to either side.

The traditional form of neutrality, selling munitions, is to the disadvantage of Germany in this particular war; the new-fangled embargo neutrality helps Germany at the expense of the Allies.

A much more decisive question, however, relates to the true meaning of partiality. Neutrality—in the proper meaning of the word—is to some extent what we make it, but right and wrong are right and wrong whatever we say or do. And true impartiality is emphatically not treating everyone alike, but treating him as he deserves.

An umpire is not impartial when he puts a man out for slugging, but he is partial or incompetent if he does not.

The contest in Europe is not a tennis match between two sportsman-like rivals, who merit equal treatment, but it is—well, we all know what it is. On one side appalling sacrifices in the interest of peace; on the other aggression after aggression, broken promise after broken promise, until despair has to risk all in trying to stop it. The Senator apparently does not see why one party deserves any better or worse than the other. Our neutrality policy will necessarily help either one side or the other. And he decides emphatically, almost passionately, for the policy which helps the aggressor.

Building Wages

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The erroneous statements made again and again that "the cost of labor is the controlling factor in the cost of any building project," I hope is not deliberately made in an attempt to push building trades wages downward. Direct labor costs on most building projects amount to no more than 20 to 25 per cent of the total costs. Wages to industrial labor fabricating building materials amount to little more than 15 per cent more. Construction cost which includes the above labor costs amounts to 70 per cent of total cost. Development, land and financing account for the balance of the total cost of a building project.

Building labor rarely averaged more than $10 a day in boom times (five-day weeks—200 days a year) and amounts to not more than $8 a day at present. The fantastic figures of $16 a day so glibly assumed as an average, were paid, in boom times, to some of the highly skilled and best organized trades in Metropolitan New York, but they represent a small item in the total cost of a building.

If for instance, the building trades worker accepted a cut to $4 a day from $8, costs of building would not be halved but only reduced by about 10 per cent, assuming, of course, that it would be passed on to the owners. If the project happened to be slum clearance, would the landowner, whose property investment had been written off half a century ago, or the investment bankers accept a corresponding 50 per cent cut in their end of the deal?

If building trades workers refused to accept such a cut and public buildings projects were carried forward under the supervision of Army engineers at wages which would become, if the workers were so disorganized, as low as the traffic would bear, would not this be a step on the road that Germany has taken?

The Neibling Letter

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The undersigned American citizen respectfully declares that the letter from Carl L. Neibling, president of the German League of the United States published in The Post of September 11, is surprising in many ways.

The first surprise is that The Post published that un-American letter, which declares that Hitler's method is supreme in seizing additional lands, in dictatorship, and in suppressing liberty. Is he justified in seizing the various lands? Is Poland the last seizure? England and France are as modern as the United States and do not agree on a dictatorship of Europe, which will happen if Hitler is allowed to continue seizing more and more lands.

Balance Of Power

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: England has fought seven times to preserve the balance of power. She has sustained first one weary combatant, then another. And three centuries without a decision.

They say this is a conflict of ideologies.

In 1812 England fought to restore a monarchy to France. Yesterday she was silent godfather to fascism in Spain. And today, a war, it may be, to restore democracy to Germany.

The forms of government and the ideals change, but one issue goes on forever. It is political ascendancy over Europe.

Too weak to exercise it alone, too jealous to release it, shifting from side to side to prevent the rise of a single power, siding with Germany before and with France today, England preserves ascendancy over Europe.

And all the world is embroiled.

The Post Impressionist

A Man Of Our Town

SOMETHING, lately, has set me to thinking about Nathan Heald. Maybe it is this war business, for he was an "old soldier," a member of the G. A. R. "War," he used to say, "is an awful thing—an awful thing;" and although we were too young to sense just why, we knew it must be so, for he was a man who spoke the truth. We knew that.

But, don't fret, this is not going to be a war piece.

Nathan E. Heald was his right name, but everybody called him the Elder, as indeed he was. Sometime in his early life he had become an ordained minister of the Gospel. I don't think I ever heard him deliver a sermon, but he did do it occasionally, in a sort of apologetic way as if half-ashamed of appearing to be better than other people. Fortunately he did not have to depend for a livelihood on his ecclesiastical talents, for he drew a pension from the Government to augment what was locally known as "a little property." There were those who said he was "pretty well off," but all I knew about it was that I used to mow his lawn, and he never failed to pay me the weekly 25 cents when due, which was immediately after the heat and sweat of the battle.

Elder Heald was perhaps what is sometimes known as a "character," but, of course, we never thought of him in that way. There was nothing affected or museumesque about him. It was just that everybody in town knew him and loved him, and he them.

He had one great specialty, and that was marrying people—I mean performing the ceremony. He lived on the edge of town, in the last house within the corporation limits, and a couple could drop by and have it all over with and be 20 miles away before the marriage became generally known by those small-town practical jokers habitually in readiness to make life miserable for newly-weds.

Our house was right across the street, and, of course, we knew everything that went on at the Elder's. Many an evening, when the village and family excitement was at its nadir, while we would be sitting listlessly on the front porch, a horse and buggy would drive up and tie to the Elder's hitching post. We knew right away what was up. In a few minutes the Elder, regaled now in an obviously clean celluloid collar and a swallowtail coat, would dash over to procure a couple of witnesses.

It was usually my father and mother or eldest sister who volunteered, the rest of us being too young and snickery to trust at such sacred rites. But we would wait anxiously until they returned to get the full report, which was always entertaining and enlivening and contained some latent elements of gossip.

"The idea!" my mother would say, "Sadie Bishop marryin' that old fool Bill Hackett. It oughtn't to be permitted. I believe Elder Heald would marry anybody." Then she would tell us what the bride wore, where the pair were headed for on their wedding trip, how the bridegroom behaved and other juicy morsels incident to the functioning of a marriage witness.

The Elder also held public office—he was the truant officer. This was a rather anomalous state of affairs, too, for he was too fond of children to attend to his job in the traditional fashion. Constitutionally he was not capable of the more exacting moments of his duties. I never knew just how he managed it, but I think he worked more with the parents than with the truants, which probably really showed more perspicacity than evasion of duty.

I remember how I used to like to go to his house and go through his books. He had a big book on the Civil War illustrated with old wood engravings. He used to read to us, but not from the war book. Sometimes it was from a book of Will Carleton's poems—"Over the Hills to the Poor House" or "The New Church Organ." It is hard to know now why they fascinated us. Later, when we got older, we read to him and Nancy, his wife.

On Memorial Day I was always proud of him. He marched in the parade and was usually asked to lead in prayer at the services. With his white well-kept beard he had a distinguished way. Besides, he was our neighbor, and I knew him, and I knew he was a good man.

One day the Elder surprised everybody by buying a second-hand, one-seated Buick, antiquated even then, model about 1910. He had become suddenly sick-and-tired of driving a horse. "Heavens," people said, "a man of his age driving an automobile! It ain't safe." Nancy, his wife, was scared to death to ride with him, but nothing happened, and the old red thing chugged elegantly around town as long as its owner lived, and even longer.

I remember well the night he died of a heart attack. I was, I guess, about 15 years old. I was awakened suddenly by a terrible wailing, which seemed to be slowly approaching our house. It scared me so that my teeth chattered. Then someone pounded on our side door, and I could hear my father opening it. I recognized Nancy's voice. She had come for help—an old woman, sobbing out into the night, alone up the long walk to our door—Nathan was dead. None of us slept the rest of the night. A foundation had dropped out of our world, and we were frightened and confused.

Elder Heald has been dead now for 20 years, and Nancy is gone, too. As I say, I don't know what has set me to thinking of him. He was a sort of Pied Piper, sans motley, of our town, and full of loving kindness. I suppose he was a firmer foundation than we realized. And I think it is worthwhile to put such a man on record, before it begins to be doubted by some that his like ever existed in the memory of men now living. But unless I wrote a book I could not begin to give him to you as he really was.

Life Goes On

THE LAMAR DEMOCRAT, of Lamar, Mo., edited by Arthur Aull, reports the death there recently of Miss Josephine Norris, age 86, at her apartment in the opera block. Mr. Aull writes that she was born at Tuffet Plain, Ohio, in 1853 and migrated to Golden Grove, Mo., near Lamar, with her parents when she was 3 years old. Her father, the late Col. David Norris, was the first Representative in the Missouri Legislature of Barton County and held other positions of distinction and public trust until he was assassinated in August, 1874, after some boundary trouble with Francis Hieronymous, a neighbor. Col. Norris was shot in the back as he rode along with a bucket of salt to his cattle on the disputed range.

The account of the outrage published in the Lamar Democrat at the time said: "The victim of the most cowardly and atrocious murder that has ever disgraced our country breathed his last from the effects of a pistol shot supposed to have been fired by Hieronymous or William Dixon, who seems to have hung around the Hieronymous premises. The corner's inquest resulted in a verdict against Hieronymous and Dixon.

Belle Of County At Time Of Tragedy

"THE LATTER had fled and for some time could not be found, but Hieronymous protested his innocence and declared Dixon was the guilty party. While his examination proceeded before Squire Bowman, Dixon was arrested in a straw stack near Ash Grove. Dixon directly implicated Hieronymous."

"At the time this tragedy darkened her life," Mr. Aull writes, "Josephine Norris was the belle of the countryside. She was 21. She had a dashing and most gallant lover, Jim Ward, brother of the late Judge E. B. Ward. Jim had made a gallant record in Gen. Jo Shelby's Cavalry during the four long bloody years of the Civil War, and when the conflict ended was one of the daredevil troopers who followed their leader to Mexico to take service under the Emperor Maximilian. As the curtain dropped on Maximilian's romantic rule it is declared that Jim was one of the faithful guards who got the Empress Carlotta out of Mexico."

Her Romance Also Ended Unhappily

MR. AULL WRITES that when Jim Ward came back from Mexico he fell in love with the beautiful and high-spirited Josephine Norris, but could never quite bring himself to settle down in the sober ways of peace and be a family man. So, while he loved Josephine and she undoubtedly loved him, they didn't marry. Jim died a bachelor at Mena, Ark., in 1897.

Hieronymous, the neighbor, did not live to stand trial for the assassination of the honored and respected Col. Norris, being shot dead by a person unknown as he sat by the east window of the old jail, torn down only last year.

Dixon, however, was tried and acquitted, but his counsel, the late Col. George H. Wasler, who founded the nearby town of Liberal, Mo., realized that Dixon must get away quickly, so he took him in his buggy and drove two days to Arkansas to turn him loose. But two days later Dixon was shot dead in a schoolhouse where he evidently was hiding.

Spent 32 Years Tending Mother

FOR 32 YEARS thereafter the beautiful Miss Josie cared for her mother, who died in 1906 at the age of 90. Miss Josie, who was a great reader, wrote a good many articles on controversial and philosophic subjects, including religion, and Mr. Aull says she retained friends and admirers even during the final lonely years of old age.

At her funeral services in the River Chapel there was no minister or anyone to deliver a eulogy, because "she had her own ideas of things" and was not religiously inclined, but the Milford and Lamar Rebeccas joined in conducting "their dignified and fitting ceremonial for the dead."

"Mrs. Helen Selvey, Lamar's sweet singer and generous helper at funeral services, sang 'Evening Brings Us Home,'" Mr. Aull reports, with Mrs. Dimple Moore Haddock at the piano.

"The war's doing things to prices," says an item. "Hogs jumped a cent Tuesday . . . The machinist at Logue's is declared to have received a telegram to go to work on munitions at Rock Island at $11.20 a day."

Boys Club Plans Membership Drive

The Boys Club of Washington will open its fall membership campaign October 2, it was announced yesterday.

Clubs are located at Seventeenth street and Massachussetts avenue southeast, 230 C street northwest, 2726 M street northwest and 1663 Kramer street northeast. Boys between 6 and 17 years of age are eligible for membership.

Capt. Groves Addresses CCC Camp on Safety

Capt. Hugh H. Groves, of the Eleventh Precinct, spoke at a safety meeting at CCC camp No. 2351 at Benning, yesterday afternoon.

He discussed the precautions both driver and pedestrian can take to avoid accidents, with particular emphasis on the importance of traffic signals. Capt. Groves was the guest of Camp Commander E. G. Davis and Project Superintendent E. F. Joyce.

Dobson and Marshall To Discuss Grid Hopes

Frank L. Dobson, Maryland University football coach, and George P. Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, will discuss 1939 gridiron prospects at a dinner meeting of the Reciprocity Club, to be held at 6:30 tonight in the Mayflower Hotel. Head coaches of all Washington colleges and local sports editors have been invited.

Today And Tomorrow

War Crisis Reveals Weakness Of Radio News Broadcasts

NO ONE OF US, I imagine, realizes better than the company managers and broadcasters themselves how experimental and unsettled is the art of presenting news by radio. The plain fact of the matter is that no one has as yet learned how to use the radio as a regular means of informing the people. This is in no sense a reflection on the broadcasters. The radio is new. It is also a peculiar instrument with its own special advantages and its own special limitations, and to discover how to use it properly is no simple matter.

Certainly, I can make no pretensions to having discovered a formula. I realize perfectly well from the occasional broadcasting I have done how much more difficult it is to present the news than it seems to be when you hear it done by accomplished interpreters like, for example, Mr. H. V. Kaltenborn or Mr. Raymond Gram Swing.

Breathless Alarm Irritates Listeners

However, I do have the general impression, especially after listening in during these past weeks, that broadcasters have not yet learned to distinguish clearly between the eye-witness account of an event and the report of an event. It is evident, I think, that the radio is unique when it is able to describe something that is actually happening while it is happening, for example, a football game, a prizefight, a Presidential inauguration, or the scene on the floor of a political convention. The popularity of radio began, I imagine, with reporting of this sort, and no other medium can give the same sense of dramatic immediacy.

But not everything can be described by eye-witnesses. Yet radio broadcasting as a whole is, I think, infected by the notion that all news ought to be treated as if the broadcaster were an eye-witness of the event. That is the reason, I suspect, why so many broadcasters speak in an excited and falsely dramatic tone of voice, and thus communicate to their listeners a feeling of anxiety.

Nobody has enjoyed the hideous news that the radio and the newspapers have had to present, but I feel fairly sure that the popular resentment against the radio which has been only too evident in the past ten days, has been caused by the broadcasters who threaten the listener in a hot, moist and fervent voice, conveying a mood of breathless alarm and mounting danger. That manner may be all very well for reporting a prizefight, but when the event itself is intrinsically important, most of us would prefer to have it announced in a dry, crisp, clear, deliberate voice and in a language of nouns and verbs and direct statements, rather than of adjectives and metaphors.

Radio Needs More Careful Editing

IN DEALING with the war it is evident that the radio is unable to employ its special and unique talent, the eye-witness description of events while they are happening. Microphones cannot be set up on the battlefields or in the military headquarters or in the government offices. Therefore, radio is reduced as respects news to announcing over the air selected reports out of those gathered by the newspapers. Radio has no such facilities as has the press for gathering news. It can only duplicate, and at that partially and inadequately, what the press associations, with their world-wide connections, and what special correspondents are able to gather.

That being the case, the problem in radio is the editorial problem, how to select out of a great mass of incoherent and conflicting messages what is true and important and how to present it intelligently and fairly. Here again the radio is in danger of making a vice out of its own virtue. News can be read off over the radio much more quickly than it can be set up in type and printed and distributed by a newspaper. But that means that radio is under constant temptation to announce news before it has been properly checked and edited. The newspapers have to act quickly enough. But at least they have some time between editions to think about what they are doing, and, moreover, at the principal clearing houses of the news there is a far more seasoned personnel than radio could possibly have recruited at this early stage of its development.

News Broadcasts Need Slowing Up

EXCEPT FOR the announcement of news of great importance and absolute certainty, as, for example, the news that a war has been declared, the radio ought, I think, to present the news less often—perhaps only twice a day, but at greater length and not hot off the ticker but edited, as a newspaper is edited. The gadget which makes it possible to record and then broadcast would seem to provide the means for presenting news that has been properly prepared and edited.

If I were a station manager I think I would broadcast a news report only from record that I had been able to hear before it was put on the air. That is what newspapers do when they pass the news through the hands of copyreaders and proofreaders and editors before starting the presses.

This would slow up the radio news. But slowing up is just what radio needs if it is to do its work competently.

In principle, the same may be said of the radio commentators. The best of them are amazingly fluent, well informed, and they are concerned for the truth. But no one can do successfully what they attempt to do. That is to say, no one can improvise in a few hours an interpretation of events like those amidst which we are now living, and it is a sign of the immaturity of radio that the companies think it can be done.

Newspaper Writers Also Can Revise

ON A RESPONSIBLE newspaper the editorial comment is generally written the day before publication. Except in emergencies, the editorials in this morning's newspaper were written during the morning, afternoon and early evening of yesterday. That means that the editorial writer had some time to read, to study, to reflect, to consult, and to revise his editorial. Moreover, no newspaper which attempts to comment on the general news of the world expects any one editorial writer to write about all the news. There is a group among whom the task of following the news, and understanding it, is divided. But in radio it is still assumed that one man can be a universal commentator.

The radio has perhaps been misled by the crew to which I now belong, namely the newspaper columnists, each of whom does give the effect of covering a vast amount of territory. The radio managers must not be deceived. Whatever the uses of the columnist, he is not capable of doing the work of the editorial page because he is only a single person dealing with a small part of the whole immense human scene.

At that, we all write too much, and even when we have the good sense to say nothing on a subject because we have nothing to say, we say something about some other subject because it would be too much trouble to explain to our readers that we are not dead, sick, assassinated, in jail, or suppressed by the censor, if we omit an article when our minds are a blank.

Yet at worst newspaper columnists only write once a day, whereas on the radio I have listened to commentators several times in the same day, and day after day. It is often astonishing how well they do it. But when radio grows up, it will be recognized that here as elsewhere a sound product cannot be improvised but must be made by men who have the time needed to take a lot of trouble.

Borah Is Not Invited

While Senator Borah was among those members attending the White House conference in July at which the President made a final but futile effort to bring about favorable action on the repeal legislation at the last session, he was not invited to the meeting next week. He is the ranking minority member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Administration success in getting its neutrality program out of the latter committee, where it was held up by a 12-to-11 vote then, was assured yesterday when Senator Van Nuys, who previously voted to delay consideration, wrote to a constituent that he would support a "cash-and-carry" plan of sales if proper safeguards were attached.

When Congress assembles, the President, in a message, will present the topic or topics he wants considered. While he said last week that he saw no reason to ask for anything but the repeal of the embargo, there have been indications that he may favor some legislation strengthening antiprofiteering legislation, which Attorney General Murphy has said is "inadequate."

Senator Borah has said the extra session should look into the formation of the new War Resources Board recently set up with Edward R. Stettinius as its head.

Stettinius and Swope Call

Stettinius was a White House caller yesterday as was Herbert Bayard Swope, assistant chairman of the War Industries Board in 1918, who indorsed the President's neutrality plans.

"We tried the type of neutrality honestly advocated by Senator Nye in 1803," Swope said, "and under it our factories shut down and our ships rotted at their wharves."

Nye continued his own attack on the President's program, saying:

"Americans had better talk now before the gags of a declared emergency are placed. I expect that from here on the Administration will be contending that every voice raised in opposition to Administration wishes is at once a pro-Hitler voice. . . .

"Be that as it may, voices will be raised and there will be what there must be—namely, a complete demonstration to the American people of what the President's wishes will certainly lead America into."

Bloom, making it plain that the House will wait on Senate action on neutrality, said there was no doubt the embargo would be repealed.

The House passed Bloom's Administration-favored bill, but only after writing into it the Vorhys amendment providing an embargo on lethal weapons. Bloom insists there are enough House votes now to eliminate the latter clause when the bill comes back to the House. However, normal procedure would begin first, in the extra session, by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee reporting out a bill for floor action.

War Department Staff Completed

War Department officials said yesterday that the expansion of civilian employes required by the armament program voted by Congress is now complete, and that appointments will be made hereafter only to fill vacancies.

About 40 employes, mostly clerks, typists and drafts[illegible] have been added weekly during the past month and a half, it was said. Any further expansion of the civil force, incident to the present emergency, will have to await additional Congressional appropriations, it was said.

How to Torture Your Wife

War Between Ideologies

By Mark Sullivan

Stalin's Strategy

IN WATCHING this war, and anticipating its future developments, a natural point of view is to proceed by analogy to the war of 25 years ago. But there is good reason to say this war is not like the former one, and that it will not follow the same pattern.

One point of view, at least tenable, is to dismiss the notion that this is a war between nations. Assume it is primarily a war between ideologies. True, the assumption that this is a war between ideologies does not fit all the facts. For example, on the part of Germany, this is to some extent a war for the acquisition of territory. But neither does any other assumption fit all the facts.

On one side is Germany, backed up by Russia. On this side the ideology is what may be called Nazi-communism. This Nazi-Communist ideology includes, among others, the following features: Centralized government by a dictator; the negation of parliamentary government; denial of rights to individuals and minorities; denial of the right of opposition parties to exist; denial of freedom of opinion; denial of religion—in Russia complete denial. In Germany a far-reaching and increasing denial; denial of economic individualism, and substitution of collectivism—in Russia this denial is complete, in Germany increasingly so.

Stalin Can Be Dominant Partner

ON THE OTHER side are Britain and France. On this side the ideology can be described roughly as being what the Nazi-Communist ideology is not.

Whatever opinion others may have about this being primarily a war of ideologies, it is fairly certain that Stalin looks upon it as such. And Stalin is important. As between Stalin and Hitler, Stalin can be the dominant partner, whenever he chooses. For Stalin controls the food and supplies that Germany depends upon.

If Stalin says it's a war of ideologies, then it's a war of ideologies.

Stalin holds, as his central purpose, the imposition of communism on the world. Consequently Stalin's strategy will be obvious. Stalin's strategy will be to see that Britain and France exhaust themselves in war. In the paralysis and chaos that would follow a war to exhaustion, Stalin would have his opportunity to impose communism on western Europe. It was in that condition that the Communist leaders were able to impose their system on the only country in which they have had success—in Russia, during the exhaustion and chaos following the Great War. Stalin hopes for a war that will end in exhaustion for Britain and France.

Allies Will Avoid War Of Exhaustion

IF BRITAIN and France see this as Stalin's strategy, they will have a strategy of their own. They will so conduct their side of the war as to avoid exhaustion. If that is their plan, they would avoid many of the things they did during the Great War. They would less often, or never, make strong offensive attacks. They would avoid drives costly in men and material. They would avoid attempts at decisive battle. A war so conducted as to avoid exhaustion would be a long war.

Assuming that Britain and France hold avoidance of exhaustion as their primary strategy, one can envisage a program. On the front line along the Rhine, Britain and France would keep only what force is necessary to hold the line and would refrain from attack. They attack at present only for the purpose of drawing German troops to the west, and thus helping Poland.

When and if Poland is defeated, then the French and British would entrench behind the Maginot Line and refrain from attacks. Instead of putting maximum manpower on the front, they would withhold much of their manpower for civil pursuits. With the purpose of keeping up their normal industry and economy—that is, with the purpose of avoiding exhaustion.

Britain To Keep Control Of Seas

BRITAIN WOULD dedicate itself mainly to keeping control of the sea. She would maintain an embargo of Germany, and also, if necessary and possible, of Russia. With control of the sea, Britain and France would seek to maintain and extend their peacetime trade—not only their own trade but that of neutrals. They would seek to bring about a world in which, with Germany and Russia cut off and isolated, the rest of the world would carry on as near to normally as possible. The possibility of achieving this would depend much, of course, on the effectiveness of British command of the sea.

In such a course, many other nations would join Britain. It is not that they would join her as combatants—they would remain neutral. But every neutral nation would be glad to take part in trade. They would contribute to building up as large a world trade as possible. They would become willing and pleased parts of a world in which, with Germany and Russia cut off, the rest of the world would function as nearly normal as possible. It is necessary to repeat that all this depends much on the effectiveness of Britain's command of the sea.

Germans Can't Stand Prolonged Strain

THE PICTURE would be: Britain and France with 50 per cent of their strength devoted to holding Germans in check, 50 per cent devoted to ordinary industry and trade. In the world as a whole the picture would be: All the nations, except Germany and Russia, carrying on some approximation to normal trade and business.

Meanwhile, Germany and Russia, isolated, would get along as they could. The two combined—Germany's technical skill with Russia's raw materials—might achieve a self-sustaining status, a world of their own. But within their common ideology, within Nazi-communism as a system of society and government, there might be explosions. Hitler and Stalin and their respective governing groups do not love each other. Moreover, under prolonged strain, the German people might wonder if Hitler is worth what he costs.

The Factor Of Sea Power

DURING the first 11 days of the present conflict 16 British ships, with a total registry of close to 100,000 tons, were sent to the bottom, victims, for the most part, of Germany's revived submarine campaign.

The seriousness of this loss cannot be discounted. Great Britain has the largest merchant marine afloat, with a total tonnage estimated last year at more than 20,000,000 tons. Yet if U-boat depredations are kept up at the present rate the British would find themselves, before very many months, in a decidedly precarious situation.

During the past two years the British government has taken measures to build up reserves of foodstuffs and raw materials sufficient to keep the country and its population going for some months no matter what happens. But the British have not been able, through such measures, to eliminate the necessity of keeping sea lanes uninterruptedly open. No great power is less self-sufficient than Great Britain.

THE GERMANS know it. That is why they embarked on the desperate device of unrestricted submarine warfare during the last war even though many German leaders realized that it would mean the entry of the United States on the side of the Allies. And that is, no doubt, why this time they began the U-boat campaign within a few hours after Great Britain declared war.

From the German point of view time is of the essence. Great Britain must be reduced to the starvation point quickly or that objective cannot be achieved at all. For while submarine warfare was a comparatively new weapon in 1917 it holds few mysteries for the British now. There is every reason to believe that the invaluable experience they gained in 1917 and 1918 in combating the U-boat they will now apply as soon as possible.

The circumstance that during recent years they have been piling up a tremendous tonnage in destroyers, shows that they are not unprepared. As soon as the convoy system which worked so effectively in 1917 can be organized it is probable that the menace of the German submarine will be met.

GERMANY is not likely to starve out Great Britain. Can Great Britain starve out Germany?

It is not unlikely that the answer to this question will determine the outcome of the present war even as it did the last. More than any other single factor it was the British blockade which resulted in the collapse of the Kaiser's Reich. And the effectiveness of the present blockade of Germany may have a greater bearing on the final result of the struggle than any battle on the Eastern or Western Front.

IN THE SUMMER of 1918, when Germany's fortunes rapidly began to ebb, the position of the Reich was outwardly very impressive.

She was in control of almost all of Belgium and Luxemburg. She was in occupation of France's important industrial area of the north. In the east, all of present-day Poland, practically all of Rumania and the entire Baltic coast were in German hands. And following the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk the Russian Ukraine became, to all intents and purposes, a German satrapy. Moreover, Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey were Germany's allies.

Yet this vast domain did not permit Germany to feed herself adequately or to provide the armies in the field with all the supplies they needed. By the summer of 1918 Germany was played out. Her collapse came before there was a single enemy soldier on German soil.

TO BE SURE the Germany of Hitler has taken far greater precautions to meet the threat of a blockade than did the Germany of the Kaiser.

The successive four-year plans have had for their specific purpose the achievement of a degree of self-containment capable of permitting the Reich to laugh at a blockade. The agreement with Russia may open the doors to the wheat and oil and minerals of the U. S. S. R.

Yet the fact that within a fortnight of the outbreak of the war the meat rations permitted individual Germans has been cut from the already very limited amount decreed late last month shows that the specter of ultimate starvation stares the Nazi regime in the face.

IN HIS SPEECH last Saturday Gen. Goering sought to reassure the German people of the impregnability of their position. He boasted of Germany's resources and of the Reich's ability to withstand a long siege. But to thoughtful Germans his boasts must have sounded somewhat hollow. They had been told over a period of many months that Hitler would get everything he was after without war. War came. They were then kept in ignorance of the fact that Great Britain and France had begun to throw their weight in the scales on Poland's side. They were told, instead, that there was no fighting worth mentioning on the Western Front, the idea being that Great Britain and France would give up and the war would be over once Poland had been defeated.

Poland has not yet been defeated and the fighting in the west is increasing to the point where it is no longer possible for the Hitler regime to keep that fact from the German people. Now they are being comforted with the argument that Germany can hold out indefinitely. To the Germans already asked to tighten their belts to a degree that may recall the turnip winter of 1916, this is scant comfort, indeed. For if it is a long fight the odds which have favored Germany at the outset will progressively diminish.

Now, as in 1914-1918, sea power may prove to be the ace of trumps. And it is Great Britain, not Germany, which holds it.

Congressional Leaders Laud Post

But during the past several days, I have noticed The Post, with its new service, has provided the District with as complete and accurate accounts of European events as can be found anywhere."

Chauncey G. Parker, jr., broker and chairman of the Community Chest, had this to say:

"The Post has always been enterprising. I don't see how it accomplishes all the things it does. I am a constant follower of the New York Times and I think this new service is wonderful."

Morris Cafritz, real estate broker: "The Times service is excellent. It gives a very complete picture. I'm sure every reader appreciates the opportunity of having such a splendid chance to keep posted on foreign happenings."

Sperry Says It's Great

Marcey Sperry, president, Washington Gas Light Co.: "I think the Times service is great. I enjoy reading it because I know the facts are accurate. The Post is offering a fine public service."

Thomas Morgan, Community Chest campaign worker and Washington civic leader: "The Post did a very sensible thing in adding the Times service to its columns. It makes good reading and tells us just what is occuring on the other side."

Herbert L. Willett, jr., Community Chest director: "The Times service is a most welcome addition to The Post. I follow The Post and its news sources closely and have yet to find a flaw."

Others who praised The Post's addition of the New York Times war news service to its coverage were:

Senate Aide Laudatory

Col. Edwin A. Halsey, Secretary of the Senate: "The Post has always been a most interesting and comprehensive newspaper—but especially since the adoption of the New York Times War News Service. It now is definitely all that one would wish for in covering national and war news."

South Trimble, Clerk of the House: "Addition of the New York Times War News Service makes The Post even more outstanding than before. Readers of The Post feel confident that the paper, with five different wire services, gives them as complete news as can be obtained."

Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University: "My reaction is very favorable. I was very much gratified to know that The Post is taking advantage of the New York Times service. It has greatly improved your reporting of foreign news."

Dr. Haycock Complimentary

Dr. Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of District of Columbia schools: "The New York Times is recognized as a valuable source of information, so this service will, of course, contribute for Post readers a broader understanding of the situation in Europe."

Robert A. Maurer, vice president of the Board of Education: "In times like these, the public benefits by having many sources of information. The New York Times War News Service is a valuable addition to The Post."

Frank C. Daniel, principal of McKinley High School: "I like the new service very much; it is very complete. It gives you a satisfying feeling you are getting the facts of the case, and that's what we want, after all. We can form our own analysis of the case, but we do like to have facts to go on."

Lawson J. Cantrell, principal of Paul Junior High School: "I think The Post offers the most complete service I've found in a considerable length of time. The New York Times Service is complete, and seems to be authentic, written in an unbiased manner. I've enjoyed it very much."

War Rules For The Radio

1. There shall be more restraint in the manner of handling war bulletins and a little more in handling radio entertainers swept aside by them.

2. Caution must be emphasized in all war broadcasts. No member of the great unseen audience should be left flat on his back, with one leg over his head, just because Paris has come in in the midst of the setting-up exercises.

3. Radio should at all times be neutral and avoid showing favoritism as between Rudy Vallee and a London communique. It should at all times avoid cracks by radio comedians disparaging a war, and from any war office disparaging a radio comedian.

4. The influx of radio war commentators should be curbed before it gets too late.

5. The question of what makes a competent radio war commentator should be settled immediately. The fact a man once visited France, played with wooden soldiers as a child and has a nice voice should not be accepted as qualifying him completely to diagnose every move by the field marshals of Europe.

* * * *

6. Neither should a man be hired as a radio war expert because he spent three months at Yaphank, keeps a dog named Napoleon and can pronounce "Bydgoscz."

7. The practice of suddenly handing important war bulletins to lady radio speakers just as they are in the midst of a talk on formal gardens or a pudding recipe should be discontinued. It is highly disconcerting to hear somebody say in a startled soprano voice: "Take the whites of two eggs, add a pint of milk and continue to attack over difficult terrain along a 200-mile front."

8. War newscasters should be liberated from their sponsors. Nothing is any sillier than to hear that two great armies are now engaging in the greatest battle of the war and that whimsey-dimsies are a cereal that will give you all the energy of youth and also remove facial blemishes.

9. We also think it pretty annoying to hear "News of a major engagement of bombing fleets over the Kiel Canal are now coming in. You, too, can have those pearly white teeth that are the mark of distinction anywhere."

10. Weather forecasts, wrist watch harangues, chats on the proper care of rock gardens and hot bulletins from the war area should not be mixed on the same program. The radio audience is confused enough.

* * * *

11. Ball games should be immune from interruption by war bulletins, and the war should be immune from interruption from ball games. With the bases full and DiMaggio up people don't care what Neville Chamberlain is doing. And with the French army in a clash with the German forces radio fans consider the situation in the last half of the fifth (even in Brooklyn) trivial.

12. Any attempt by any radio station to get a cigarette manufacturer to sponsor the war in any sector shall be forbidden.

Grandma Speaks

I was his mother and I saw him go,
While I fought grimly to bite back the tears—
I think that I was brave and did not show
What my heart felt as certain from its fears—
That I would never see his face again:
And so it proved to be, but as I read
The printed line it somehow eased the pain,
To know that he was quickly, cleanly dead;
I wept with pride—still not too old to cherish
Illusions which these years served to efface—
That brave young lives like his must needs perish
To make this world of ours a better place;
And I had you, his child—and mine, being his,
To fill my empty heart, and as you grew
To manhood there was comfort left in this—
That my own son lived on again in you;
And now the earth is shaken—now, as then,
The iron grasp of war may reach for you;
Oh, God, is this a world of only men,'
Or is it not a world of women, too?
Why cannot women make their voices heard,
To stop this useless slaughter of their sons—
What punishment is not to be preferred
To giving up our men to feed the guns?
We may appear as cowards in men's eyes,
Who prate of courage, duty, honor, glory—
We do not need war's added sacrifice,
Since each one is a chapter in our story.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Her Next Incarnation

She will live in a luxuriously furnished penthouse or soundproof apartment with maid service, and with all the mechanics of living taken care of by the management.

She will arise leisurely around 9 or 10 o'clock, go into her modernistic bathroom, and step into a sunken tub in which an entire bottle of bath salts has been emptied to produce a pool of fragrant, white foamy suds—and stay there as long as she feels like it.

She will revel in an orgy of expensive and lasting fragrance night and day—dusting powders, colognes, sachets and imported perfumes.

She will take a short, invigorating walk every morning in the park, breathing deeply and leading a dear little Scottie or Pekingese.

She will have somebody in daily to brush her hair 500 times, and not have to twist herself double doing it herself; she will have a masseuse in every day or so to relax her taut nerves; she will spend hours in the beauty shop having facials, special oil manicures, scalp treatments, bleaches and all the works, and she will join a gym class, a dancing class, a speech class, a breathing class, a swimming class, a health class, a soul culture class—every kind of class that will make her more beautiful and more fascinating.

She will take a siesta every day right after lunch, and when she is going out in the evening she will rest an hour before she starts dressing so she will be bright and vivacious even without the aid of the first Martini.

She will never wear herself out battling crowds on street car or bus, or never weary herself hanging to a strap, but will ride grandly in taxicabs, even if she is only going two blocks.

She will go periodically to some peaceful retreat (with modern conveniences) down in the country to "vegetate," cure her nerves and iron the lines out of her face.

She will have scads of beautiful and beguiling negligees, hostess gowns and fancy pajamas and will spend the major part of her time on a chaise longue with all the latest books and magazines at her elbow.

She will be surrounded constantly by BEAUTY—vases of fresh flowers, figurines, etchings, oil paintings, hammered brass, Chinese rugs, antique furniture and rare objets d'art.

She will have frequent checkings with the doctor, the dentist, the physical culturist, the oculist, the chiropodist, the psychoanalyst and all other specialists, to see if she is keeping herself in the very best of condition.

She will have hovering somewhere in the background an indulgent—and moneyed—husband who will send flowers and gifts on all anniversaries, who will bring home surprises, plan rides and cruises, who will accompany her to stores and insist on her buying the more expensive hats and mink coats, who will constantly admonish her to "rest more," and who will save her from all anxiety, strain and worry.

Yes, in her next incarnation she will have done with all this daily rush, work, struggle and exhaustion and really take care of herself. And yet, living it all over in imagination, the thought frequently comes to her as she ends one of the days in Dream World—"Mightn't it all be just a little dull?"

Tweeds Hold Their Own With Frilly Fashions, Low-Heeled Pumps Popular Accompaniments

The Post Fashion Editor

Town and country tweeds are now ingratiating themselves into women's fashion consciousness—even elbowing the bustle into a back seat. Beautifully colored and textured tweeds are just as essential a wardrobe need this fall as ever, despite the present gracious ladylike styles. The chevron striped tweed coat at right with its dress-like cut of sleeves and coat-hanger yoked shoulders is best worn with its simple men's hatter felt.

The straightforwardness of this costume makes it imperative that correct, skillfully turned shoes be worn afoot. Here are the proper shoes designed by Newton Elkin who called them "Dali" after the famous surrealist artist who paints his impressionistic designs in rythmic line.

The closeup below shows how these "Dalis" carry out the same striped affect as the tweed coat through precision stitching of the kid. The walled last, modified low heel and terraced toe of this modernized opera pump give freedom to feet that must climb miles of city hill and dale this fall. And the trim stitched bow is refining enough for women who like their tweeds and accessories soft and feminine.

Incidentally, the spectator pump with an honest-to-goodness walking heel is stealing the show from dressier shoes, according to several local buyers. One of them reports that it is impossible to keep her Dali modernisms in stock due to the number of women who insist upon a smart but down-to-earth comforting quality in their shoes. When women demand sensible clothes like the ones pictured here, it's always a comforting sign that their feet are firmly on the ground, mentally and sartorially.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Married to Man Who 'Lives Entirely Within Himself,' Woman Asks How to Achieve Closer Relationship

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For seven years, I have tried to make a success of my marriage: first, because of a natural tendency to "make a go" of anything I undertake; and, secondly, because I dread the confusion of divorce. I am self supporting, so I am not remaining for financial reasons. I wonder if you, with your keen, intuitively accurate perception, can tell me what is best to do, after I have explained my dissatisfaction.

My husband lives entirely within himself. I can't get him interested in anything. Before marriage, he claimed to be violently in love with me, and said he would kill himself if I didn't marry him. After we were married, he immediately dropped his enthusiasm and sank back into his introspective moods and manner of living—without friends, diversions, hobbies or interests. If he has ever enjoyed anything, I have never known what it is.

I might think I had caused this peculiar attitude, except that he was that way before we married, save for the six brief months during which he begged me to marry him. Now, his only sign of affection is that described by one of your recent correspondents, who said of her husband that, "he wants me to sit in the room with him, while he reads." Oh yes, he says he loves me; but it is my idea that he doesn't love me and isn't aware of it.

You have sometimes recommended psychiatry as a means of restoring marital happiness, but that's "out," because he says there is nothing wrong with him and he won't go. I suggested that we'd both go together and perhaps a doctor would show me if I were wrong. But no!—emphatically and without further explanation! He won't go and he won't discuss it. He turns to a book and I get terribly depressed.

He isn't in love with anyone else, as he doesn't like girls, and I wonder how he ever happened to marry me, unless it was because he thought he couldn't have me. We have a darling baby, toward whom he is indifferent and whom he doesn't support, and I want to give her a happy home—with or without him. Do you advise divorce? POLLY.

Replace Rebellion With Acceptance

DEAR POLLY: It is safe to say that you, personally, can make your marriage at least 50 per cent more satisfactory than it is—if you will. And this without any perceptible change of attitude on your husband's part. The usual reaction of the average individual to a chafing situation is to suppose that happiness can be invoked only by altering the face or nature of that situation, or by changing the attitude of other individuals involved.

The possibility that he may be at least 50 per cent to blame for his wretchedness seldom occurs to the complainant. In 99 cases out of 100, he fails to realize that by making a philosophical adjustment to things as they are—particularly if and when "things as they are" cannot be changed—he will have robbed them of their power to irritate. There is a hardy saying to the effect that, "what can't be cured must be endured." And in this case, I am inclined to think that the fundamental pattern of your husband's personality cannot be altered. He probably will remain a taciturn man to the end of his days.

What would it avail you, therefore, to attempt to punish him—as you would be doing in undertaking divorce—simply for being what he is? When you married him, you accepted him "for better or for worse;" and at his worst, he is just a negative personality: not a drunkard, not a wife-beater, not a nagger, not a philanderer, a liar, a cheat or a ne'er-do-well. And in his negative way, he pays you the supreme compliment of being silently, but fully, content with life, so long as you are at his side.

In the current issue of Your Life magazine, there is an article by a noted psychologist, dealing with discordant marital situations comparable to yours. This psychologist has learned, in 11 years' experience at solving such problems, that happiness is almost invariably within reach of the complainant who can be induced to assume full responsibility for bringing it about. But he also makes it clear that his most difficult assignment, as a professional mediator in marital quarrels, is that of persuading the complaining partner to do unto his better half as he would wish to be done by.

In your case, you would have your husband revolutionize his personality and social performance. You consider this the only possible appeasement of your discontent. Obviously, it has not occurred to you, during the past seven years, to undertake this program yourself. Yet it seems equally obvious that your particular type of temperament is much more amenable to change than his. The out-going personality is much more adaptive than the introverted type. And it is curious that you would be tentatively willing to undertake the hazardous—and always potentially demoralizing — change which would be implicit in divorce, while tacitly rejecting the safer and more contributive change that would be implicit in adjusting yourself gracefully to your husband's idiosyncracies.

It is to be regretted that your husband flatly refuses to cooperate in the matter of inaugurating—with psychiatric assistance—a program of harmonious compromise. But this need not and should not deter you from launching an individual program, authoritatively sponsored. Half a loaf of improvement is infinitely to be preferred to no improvement at all. And the great value of first-hand psychiatric or psychological analysis of such problems as yours lies in giving the complainant a bird's-eye view of the obstacles to be overcome, together with a list of specific suggestions for surmounting them. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Don't Trust Friends to Tell You When You Need to Go on a Diet

THE HARDEST PART about going on a diet is making up your mind to go no a diet. Then, the minute you do it becomes something of a social affair. Your friends all take a stand on the matter and most of them—having been brought up to be polite at the expense of truth—assure you that you don't need to lose a pound.

Don't Trust Friends

If you want the true facts about your figure, go by the scales and your tape measure and don't let any friendly remarks sidetrack you. As far as weight goes, you should not weigh more than 110 pounds for the first 5 feet of height, with 5 pounds for each extra inch. That is the most you should weigh at any age, unless you are exceptionally large-boned, in which case you can add an extra 10 per cent. The average woman, however, has a medium frame and should start with 105 pounds for the 5 feet, adding the same 5 pounds for each extra inch.

Proportion Necessary

To have a really lovely figure, your measurements should be in proportion. Regardless of whether you are a size 34 or a normal 38, the waistline should not be less than 7 inches smaller than the bust, and the hips must not exceed the bust by more than 2, or, at the most, 3 inches. Not all women should be ultrastreamlined. But to have a good figure, your measurements should be in proportion—that's what the artist means by symmetry.

Let's be very exact about your figure program this time. By knowing what your correct weight and your exact measurements should be and by working consistently toward that goal, you cannot only turn into a far lovelier looking woman, but a much healthier one.

You should keep a weekly record of your weight changes and a monthly record of the measurement changes.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 13.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Speaking of Brokaws, as I just have, the Brokaw by marriage who is now Mrs. Henry Fonda, the "Hank" of the movies, is definitely reported to become a mother at a not far distant date, I don't know what is coming over Hollywood. Marriages have become so popular out there that you can count the eligible bachelors on the fingers of one foot, and now motherhood seems begining to rage. Are we to have no illusions left at all about the place?

"Cops and Robbers" is still a fairly popular sport here. Gunfire shattered the early morning peace of the avenue as a constable let off his horse-pistol at a hapless young man named Frank Campis who had made the tactical error of smashing the big window of a famous fur store and emerging with a $1,500 mink coat—no doubt a giftie for the girl friend. But justice prevailed, and Constables Hayes and Mooney caught Mr. Campis, who now faces three grave charges and no doubt will spend the winter at Warden Lawes' noted country club up at Ossining, on the Hudson.

DOZENS OF OTHER Americans beside Neighbor J. P. Morgan have stopped slaughtering blood-thirsty grouse in Scotland and have scuttled for home, where grouse may not be so smart, but where the terrain is safer. The Herbert Pratts and the Francis E. Powells, jr., and the J. Cornelius Rathborne's, jr., have also left the birds to their own devices. No doubt the grouse of Scotland are happier than they have been since 1918, whatever the state of the other denizens of the British Isles Gertrude Lawrence, or "Gertie" to her pals, has put off her New York opening in "Skylark" until mid-October, which leaves Broadway practically bare of openings this month. But the news arrives that Maurice Evans, one of the great "Hamlets" of all time, is to take his uncut version of the play through the Nation by October 1. Good news, that.

Men's Hats Show Color for Fall

The real men's hat story for early fall is color in the new lightweight felts. After the summer straw hats, which were extremely light, cool and comfortable, men demand a more gradual transition to winter felts than has been the custom heretofore.

The new lightweight fall felts are the answer to this demand. Dull grays and browns have long been the traditional colors in hats for men—but after a taste of the summer's colorful straws which Mr. America undoubtedly has enjoyed wearing, he'll no longer be the timid soul when selecting his fall hat wardrobe.

This fall he will go in for medium blue-grays with the blue cast quite pronounced; definite greens in dark shades; and the increasingly popular natural English covert shade.

Society's Table Talk Revolves Around War

The Old Trick of Being a Celebrity By Having a Glib Tongue and a Thin Shell of Knowledge Gives Way to Study

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

THE PROVERBIAL SOCIAL celebrity who considers herself "cultured" because she has "read a couple of books; knows Emily Post by heart, and can carry on a continuous line of tea-table chatter generously seasoned with French phrases" is a minus quantity in today's Washington scene. Social circling has become serious business, and debutantes and dowagers hereabouts are devouring books and magazine articles about Europe, past and present, as they never have before. What they are reading makes up a good deal of the table talk you're hearing on all sides.

One popular matron I know who has rarely concerned herself with anything more important than bridge and plain and fancy gossip recently declared she had given up cards entirely so she could devote her time to "studying up on the international situation." Well, I don't know whether the latter will profit much by her attention, but at least her gesture is indicative of a noticeable trend around these parts. So, if you want to center the current social limelight, you'd better spend a good part of your time poring over the printed page that concerns itself with either the background or recent developments of what's going on in Europe.

No less than a dozen times in the past two days have I heard enthusiastic references to one article, "Giddy Minds and Foreign Quarrels," by Charles A. Beard, appearing in the latest issue of Harper's Magazine. Mention of it invariably precipitates a stiff argument, and that seems to be the only thing needed to make a successful party these days.

A BOOK ABOUT POLAND that is being pulled out of the shelves for frequent reference is "Jadwiga," the thrilling biography of the famous Queen of Poland, written by Charlotte Kellogg (Mrs. Vernon Kellogg), who has probably done more than any other Washingtonian to make this country Poland-conscious.

Incidentally, Mrs. Kellogg, who has been spending the summer in her home in Carmel, Calif., returned to her home here early this week and is now in New York on business. Shortly before leaving yesterday, she had luncheon at the Polish Embassy. She is expected to be back in her home on Bancroft place this week-end. Her daughter, Miss Jean Kellogg, an accomplished artist, is still in Carmel.

MRS. KELLOGG, who spent much time in both Belgium and Poland, when her husband was in charge of relief work there after the war, began the biography when she was living in Cracow, formerly Poland's capital. Before she could finish it, however, she and Mr. Kellogg, their relief work finished, returned to Washington. Later, when she found her material insufficient, she went back to Poland, and, assisted by a professor of ancient history at the University of Warsaw, spent several additional months of research.

All in all, she devoted much of her time for seven years to the book, including three trips to Poland. The book is considered the most comprehensive account of the queen ever to be published. Last year the same story, revised for children, entitled "The Girl Who Ruled a Kingdom," and beautifully illustrated, was published.

HERE AND THERE: A talkative twosome in the Mayflower lobby yesterday were Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, wife of the new High Commissioner of the Philippines, and Mrs. William A. Morgan, who recently returned from Europe . . . Mr. and Mrs. Sayre and the latter's sons, William and Ralph, will leave on Saturday by train for the West Coast . . . The ship they are to board for Manila has been delayed and will sail two days later than they had expected . . . They'll spend that time resting on the sands at Pebble Beach, Calif.

Mention of the Philippines reminds me—back in Washington after two years in Manila are Maj. and Mrs. Oscar R. Rand, who have loads of friends here . . . Mrs. Rand, the lovely Marguerite, who dabbles a bit in writing and invariably gathers around her a lot of literary folk, will be quite an addition to the circle of attractive hostesses in the service set . . . When the Rands were here before, they had an apartment at 3100 Connecticut avenue . . . They're now at the Wardman Park Hotel.

ODDMENTS OF INTEREST: Mr. and Mrs. Snowden A. Fahnestock, who have spent most of the summer in Newport, are now at the Ritz-Carlton in New York . . . They are not expected to return here until October 1 . . . After five weeks of visiting friends and relatives in San Francisco, Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown and her small son have returned to join Mr. Brown in their Bethesda home . . . Miss Mary Alice White, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Stanley White, will have as her guest this week-end, Miss Elaine Ott, of White Plains, N. Y., who will come to Washington after attending a wedding of a college classmate in Baltimore . . . On Tuesday, Miss White will leave for Poughkeepsie, N. Y., to enter her junior year at Vassar.

Jean Preston Is Married to Mr. Browning

Couple to Make Home In Edgemoor, Md., After Southern Trip

The marriage of Miss Jean Chaplain Preston and Warren Browning took place yesterday morning at 9 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Louis Bessey, and Mr. Bessey, in Chevy Chase, Md. Mr. Browning is the son of Maj. and Mrs. William L. Browning, of Lanham, Md.

The Rev. Robert Browning, of Baltimore, an uncle of the bridegroom, officiated at the ceremony.

The couple received their vows before an improvised altar banked with ferns, palms and pink and white gladioli.

Given in marriage by Mr. Bessey, the bride wore a smart traveling ensemble of imported wool in clipper green. Her hat was brown, as were her accessories. She wore a mauve orchid and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Barr V. Washburn, of Drexel Hills, Pa., sister of the bride, was her only attendant. Mrs. Washburn's gown was of burgundy crepe.

Frank Browning, of New York City, served as best man for his brother.

Immediately after the ceremony a weding breakfast was given at Columbia Country Club. The table, centered with a tiered wedding cake, was decked with pink and white gladioli. The bride's mother wore a gray crepe frock trimmed in bands of pink and silver. Mrs. corsage was of orchids. Mrs. Browning had chosen a black ensemble for the occasion and she, too, wore a cluster of orchids.

The couple will motor to Florida and fly to Nassau. They will be at home after October 1 at 5069 Moorland lane, Edgemoor, Md.

Mrs. Browning attended the University of North Carolina and George Washington University.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Georgetown Law School. He attended the University of Edinburgh in Scotland and Maryland University.

Edward Caseys On Bridal Tour

Mr. and Mrs. Edward John Casey are on a Southern cruise following their wedding here on September 9 in the Presbyterian Church of the Pilgrims, at 3 o'clock, with the Rev. Andrew Reid Bird officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory lace over satin, ending in a train. She carried a bouquet of white rosebuds. The bride's wedding ring was made from nuggets of gold mined by her grandfather, James Franklyn Mace, sr., of Montana.

Miss Doris Givens, of New York, was the bride's only attendant. She wore a gown of blue lace and organdy. Her bouquet was of pink and white rosebuds.

Donald Mace was best man for his brother.

One by One Washington Residents Are Straggling Back From War-Torn Europe

REFUGEE NOTES:

One by one Washington residents whose whereabouts in Europe have been something of a mystery these past few weeks are beginning to straggle back into town, safe and sound. Among them is Clarence Hewes, who has just arrived after a rather harrowing trip across on the Arandora Star, British liner.

The voyage took 11 days, during which time the passengers were not at all reassured to be told of the sinking of the Athenia. The ship pursued a zigzag course, going north for a while and then down to the Azores before reaching New York. The boat, a cruise ship, was chartered by the Cunard Line.

"Buzzy" Hewes says that one of the lady passengers on board solemnly applied to the captain for an early reservation on one of the life boats, but the latter assured her equally solemnly that there were none left. However, he told that a few choice spots could be found on one of the life rafts in case of an emergency.

MRS. JOHN BIDDLE and Miss Mary Louise Adams Clements were other passengers on board who are of interest to Washington. Mr. Hewes was accompanied by his father and each was lucky enough to get a cabin all to himself.

"Buzzy" was taking the cure in Carlsbad the day the Russo-German pact was signed. Before that, he had noted rather a lull in war talk and says that they were even putting into Saint-Chapelle the beautiful stained glass windows which were removed last September.

Mr. Hewes and his father had their car with them, but were unable to motor out of Germany as they couldn't buy any gas. So they took the train to Belgium, where Minister George Gordon warned them they'd better hurry home. After various vicissitudes they reached London, where Mr. Hewes says that at Claridge's they had to hang blankets at their windows during "blackouts," and all the skylights had been painted over. At the hotel he ran into Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, of Washington, who were among the many Americans eagerly waiting transportation. Mr. Laughlin is a former United States Ambassador to Spain.

BEFORE HIS TRAVELS through Germany were so rudely interrupted, Mr. Hewes got the impression that the German people were 100 per cent behind Hitler and that they all felt aggrieved that they weren't being allowed to build up an empire the way Great Britain did in the last century.

Capital society has been wondering whether the war would cancel what promised to be the season's most lavish debut party—that which Arthur Bradley Campbell, of London, was planning to give here in honor of his two cousins, the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser, of England. But "Buzzy" reports that the trio are coming to the Capital just the same, and that they are now in Lausanne waiting transportation to this country.

Mr. Campbell is the son of the Canadian-born late Marchioness of Huntly who lived in Washington as the wife of a Standard Oil magnate before her marriage to the English peer. Mr. Campbell is a gay bachelor who divides his time between London, New York and Washington.

Mr. Hewes is also taking a young lady relative under his wing this winter, socially speaking. He will launch a pretty blond niece, Miss Ellen Hewes Flowerree, of New Orleans, who will spend the winter with him here. Later in the season he had planned to take her to London for a whirl, but of course that idyllic project has been canceled. Mr. Hewes feels almost as badly about the war as do the English, for he has hundreds of friends over there, and for a number of years has spent every summer in London.

ANOTHER WAR REFUGEE is Mrs. Hamilton Fish, who with her daughter, Elizabeth, sailed last summer for several months abroad. Elizabeth was to study in Paris for a year, but now both are on board the President Harding, expected in New York September 19.

WHITNEY STRAIGHT has left New York, and his lovely English wife, Lady Daphne Finch-Hatton, to serve in the Royal Air Force. He has cabled his wife to remain at the Waldorf with their young daughter.

Mr. Straight is a brother of Michael Straight, of Washington, whose sudden marriage in Wilton, N. H., last Sunday to Belinda Crompton was another wedding precipitated by conditions abroad. The bridegroom, who works in the Interior Department here, is a nephew of the late Ogden Mills and a grandson of William C. Whitney, who was Secretary of the Navy under President Cleveland. His mother, the former Dorothy Whitney, is now Mrs. Leonard K. Elmhirst, of England, and his late father, Willard Straight, was a famous authority on Chinese affairs and founder of two magazines, The New Republic and Asia.

Miss Armstrong also took the Dalbys to Lake Tahoe, where, for years, her family owned much of the land around Emerald Bay. All the way, she recounted stories of the early days both from memories of her childhood and things her parents had told her.

On their return to Berkeley, they were entertained by Mrs. Dalby's brother, Carl T. Bowles, at a lare party which her daughter, Helen, flew up from Hollywood to attend, and at which she sang. Later during their stay in Berkeley, they were joined by Mrs. Dalby's son-in-law, Abner Biderman, who had just finished a character part in "Balalaika," a picture with Nelson Eddy.

Open house is being held for them at the Woman's National Democratic Club, 1526 New Hampshire avenue, and it is from there Mrs. Roosevelt will deliver her broadcast at 9:30 p. m.

She will be introduced by Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, which is sponsoring the observance as its first large-scale Nation-wide money-making effort. The broadcast will be heard over the combined National, Columbia and Mutual broadcasting networks.

Mrs. Roosevelt's talk will be directed not only to rallies which will be held in 42 States, but to all citizens as well. Following her talk she will interview several women prominent in the Federal Government on the services their agencies are rendering. Participating in the broadcast will be Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor; Miss Josephine Roche, chairman of the President's Interdepartmental Committee to Co-ordinate Health and Welfare Activities; Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Social Security Board; Mrs. Florence S. Kerr, assistant WPA administrator, and Miss Helen Fuller, NYA administrative assistant.

School Board Seeks Aid To Ill Pupils

Discusses Rest For Tuberculous And New Quarters For the Crippled

The Board of Education yesterday, dealing with matters preceding the opening of schools next Monday, showed special concern for the problems of tuberculous children at the Health School and crippled children at the Langdon School.

The board discussed proposals for transferring tuberculous children with arrested cases to regular schools, where rest centers could be provided, and for transferring the crippled children's classes from Langdon School to the Health School which would have to be reconditioned. The board decided to await a report on this matter from the advisory committee on handicapped children before taking action.

To Be Discussed Wednesday

But the first business at the next meeting Wednesday will be a report from school officials whether between $2,000 and $3,000 from the schools improvement and repair fund could be used for the change. It would affect approximately 50 children at the Langdon School and about the same number at the Health School, as well as colored children at the Toner School who could be returned to regular classes.

Meanwhile Dr. Robert L. Haycock, acting superintendent, reported that the board had not yet learned whether funds would be forthcoming to continue the WPA teaching project for shut-in handicappd children.

Three Teachers Delayed

The board took the action to provide temporary substitutes for three teachers delayed in reporting for duty by the war's effect on ocean travel. They are Mrs. M. F. Richardson, teacher at Cooke School, and Miss G. M. Phillips, teacher at Brightwood School, both of whom are on slow boats returning from Europe, and Mrs. L. L. Lopez, teacher at Cook School, who is in Kingston, Jamaica.

The board adopted tuition rates for nonresident pupils as follows: Teachers' colleges, $246.89, a reduction of $13.06; senior high schools, $110.61, an increase of 16c; junior high schools, $89.11, increase of 85c; elementary schools, $63.64, an increase of $2.11; vocational schools, $128.42, an increase of $12.80; vacation schols, $4.20, a reduction of 21c; night schools, $6.80, a redution of 30c.

Funds Are Low

Dr. Haycock pointed out that appropriations for personnel for 1940 are again below pay roll obligations, as in 1939.

"It would seem extremely doubtful that the deficit of $7,459 could be saved during the current fiscal year in the salary appropriation for supervisory and administrative officers," Dr. Haycock reported.

He added, however, that the $33,196 deficit in the appropriation for salaries of teachers and librarians might be adjusted because of the many changes in personnel among such a large number of employes.

He reported little possibility of absorbing the deficit of $1,570 in salaries for clerks, but foresaw the possibility of legitimate savings to make up for the deficit of $3,788 in salaries of custodians.

Thanksgiving Adjusted

The board approved a change in the date of the schools' Thanksgiving holidays from November 30-December 1, to November 23-24, to conform with President Roosevelt's announcement.

The Board voted to enter a protest against the application for a retailer's class "D" liquor license at 2403 Nichols avenue southeast. This address is in the same block with the Birney School which has more than 600 pupils.

The Board granted permission for the occupancy of additions to the Whittier, Giddings, Bancroft and Monroe Schools, and of the new Banneker Junior High School.

Because the Banneker Junior High School will not be ready on the opening day of school, the Board decided for the Garnet-Patterson Junior High School, to accommodate the Banneker pupils from 1 to 5 p. m. and the Garnet-Patterson pupils from 8:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.

Dr. Haycock reported that the American Automobile Association is donating the use of an auto to give a driving course in Abbot Vocational School.

R. I. Ave. Citizens Urge Action to Halt Price Rise

The Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, at its first meeting of the season last night, adopted a resolution urging the District Commissioners to take action to prevent "undue rise" in food prices.

The association's special boundary committee reported a proposed realignment of its southern boundary with the Bladensburg Citizens Association from Bladensburg avenue to Evart street northeast. Another resolution urged establishment of signs prohibiting parking during morning and afternoon rush hours on New York and West Virginia avenues at their intersection with Montana avenue.

The association decided to frame a resolution asking the Commissioners to abate what members termed a nuisance in the 2800 block of Rhode Island avenue northeast. At a filling station there, they said, trucks loaded with cattle and poultry stop for service, and residents are prevented from sleeping by the noise from the trucks.

Society to Meet

The National Aquarium Society will hold its first meeting of the season at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the Bureau of Fisheries aquarium.

Boom in Work Is Noted by Job Center

Demand for Skilled Workmen Spurred By War, Officials Say

The beginning of a re-employment boom is already noticeable at the District Employment Center, which yestreday disclosed that it already is getting requests for skilled workmen for war-born industries.

"If the arms embargo provision of the neutrality act is repealed," said C. H. Bennett, public relations chief, "we won't be able to supply the demand for skilled workmen. There'll be more jobs than there were in 1929."

The first call from private industry in other cities since the outbreak of the war, Bennett said, has been for tailors trained in making military uniforms and shoe and boot craftsmen.

Gain Preceded War

The back-to-work boom was underway, however, before the Nazis marched into Poland. Each month this year the Employment Center has made substantially more placements than it did for the corresponding periods in 1938. Last month jobs were found for 3,495, which was 52 per cent more than the placements in August, 1938.

Although it's still a week until fall, the center has almost equaled the 1938 record by placing 26,305 applicants as compared with 27,968 during all last year.

Building Trade Active

Placements in the industrial and building trades are 136 per cent above 1938 on the basis of August figures. Hotel and restaurant jobs filled are up 56 per cent, and commercial and professional, 49 per cent.

Meanwhile, the active file of registered unemployed is falling off. It is now 35,993, counting persons still on relief or WPA jobs, as against 49,149 at this season last year and 45,749 at the beginning of the year.

Heim, Farber Head Atlantic Coast Patrols

The Navy yesterday ordered two of its ranking captains to fit out and take to sea on neutrality patrol some of the 60 reserve destroyers laid up at Philadelphia.

Capt. Heim

Capts. Schuyler F. Heim and William S. Farber, both Hoosiers and both on patrol duty in the Atlantic during the World War were assigned to command Destroyer Squadrons 30 and 41, which are among the vessels laid up at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

Navy officials would not reveal the size of the squadrons, but normally destroyer squadrons range from 12 to 16 ships. Crews for the vessels are being gathered from among officers and men now on shore assignments and recruits being turned out of the training stations.

Coast Guard officials revealed yesterday four of its cutters are rushing from the Pacific to assist the Navy in maintaining its watch for belligerent ships, 200 miles at sea.

Capt. Farber

Both Heim and Farber are well known in Washington, having had many assignments here.

The former graduated from the Naval Academy in 1907, and during the World War served as engineer officer of the U. S. S. Charleston engaged in convoy and patrol duty. He has commanded the destroyer Simpson and was executive officer of the cruiser Cincinnati for two years.

Capt. Farber is a classmate of Heim's at Annapolis. In the World War he served with the Allied Grand Fleet and on other duties in the submarine infested war zone. He is now an instructor at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I. Capt. Heim is Naval Reserve director at New York.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Vagaries of weather have frustrated each endeavor of the Pan American Union to present the customary open-air concerts this summer. Twice rain interfered at the last moment, and last evening an untimely autumnal chill in the air was equally efficacious in causing a change of plan. So for the third time the Hall of the Americas was crowded with guests, while in the darkened garden Xochipilli, the Aztec god of flowers, revelry and dancing, was companioned only by an insidiously nipping breeze.

Indoors William F. Santelmann conducted the United States Marine Band in a program of "Music of the Americas" representing Argentina, Brazil, Cuba, Guatemala, Mexico and Venezuela. First to be heard was a lively "March of Brazilian Aviators" by Joao Nascimento, strictly formal in structure but far from conventional in melodic material. This was followed by the most serious work of the concert, an ambitious overture by the Argentinian composer, Alberto Williams, who preserved the classical proportions of the overture form and effectively invested them with local color.

Subsequent items included an irresistably rhythmic paso doble, "Esther Pages," by Emilio Guede of Cuba; a Guatemalan waltz, "Recuerdos," by Marcial Prem; selections from the first Brazilian opera to receive European attention, "Il Guarani," by Carlos Gomes; "El Adios de las Gaviotas" by Augusto Brandt, of Venezuela; the familiar Cuban dance, "Lucumi," by Ernesto Lecuona, and o potpourri of Mexican national airs by Rafael Galindo.

Two members of the band were presented in solo numbers: Luiz Guzman in Frederico Villena's flute fantasia on popular Venezuelan tunes, and Winfred Kemp, cornetist, in "Tabare" by Alfredo Schiama, of Argentina.

Francisco Tortolero, a Mexican tenor with a pleasantly lyric voice, was the guest soloist, appearing in place of "Los Rancheros," three singing guitarists, who were unable to be present. His first group consisted of two songs by compatriot composers, Miguel Prado's "Dureme" and Lorenzo Barcelata' "Maria Elena." For his second group he chose the Cuban "Aquellos Ojos Verdes" by Nilo Menendez and the Venezuelan "Alma Llanera" by Pedro Gutierrez. In his concluding group were "Peradia" by Alberto Dominguez, of Mexico, and "Flores Negras" by Sergio del Karlo, of Cuba.

Truck Drivers Strike Here For More Pay

Want 90 Cents an Hour Instead of 75 Cents; Settlement Predicted

Settlement of the truck drivers' strike within a week was predicted yesterday by John Coyne, president of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor.

The dispute, which threatens to halt construction on half a dozen major projects here, "is strictly a question of wages," Coyne said. Approximately 350 operators of transit mixers quit work yesterday, demanding an hourly wage of 90 cents. Contracts with members of the Dump Truck Association, which expired August 31, provided 75 cents an hour.

Representatives of Truck Drivers Local No. 639 and the Union of Operating Engineers, Local 77, summoned to a special meeting in Coyne's office, denied yesterday that any jurisdictional dispute was involved in the present strike.

Drivers and engineers have contested jurisdiction over concrete mixer trucks for several years, it was conceded, but delegates for both unions insisted the controversy was not connected with the walkout.

Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, said he expected union and employer representatives to confer tomorrow on the wage dispute.

Legion Post Elects

A. D. McKinnon, as commander of Potomac Post, No. 40, American Legion, heads new officers elected last night at a meeting at Palisades Field House. Others were Fred A. Shafer, first vice president; J. R. Boetler and J. R. Ager, second and third vice presidents; Edward F. Aydt, finance officer, and Kenneth Jenks, sergeant at arms.

The Rev. Louis C. Vaeth, pastor of Our Lady of Victory Church, who recently returned from Europe, gave a short talk on the war. Ellis R. King, of the department of welfare office, appealed to members to contribute old clothes for the needy.

Woman Back From England Has Gas-Mask for Reminder

Mrs. George H. Lynch and daughter, Joan, demonstrated gas mask at homecoming party last night at their residence, 3028 Forty-fifth street northwest. Both returned from England on the American Trader the day fighting started in Poland

Mrs. Lynch's Thoughts at D. C. Homecoming Party Revert to Kin and Friends in Britain; She Sailed the Day Fighting in Poland Began

Mrs. George H. Lynch, native of England, naturalized American citizen, wife of an official of the Veterans' Administration, laughed with her friends last night at a home-coming party at her home, 3028 Forty-fifth street northwest, but her thoughts were with other friends and relations she had left in "the old country."

Obliging, embarrassed, and a little disapproving, she posed for photographers with her 15-year-old daughter, Joan, and her gas mask, souvenir of the war-threatened England from which she escaped on the American Trader the day fighting began in Poland.

Joan and her 8-year-old sister, Robin, spent four months in England with their mother this summer. Joan's impressions of the historic scenes she had lived through were confused and vague, obscured by worry over examinations she must take today at Immaculata Seminary, where she is a sophomore.

But to Mrs. Lynch the picture was still vivid—Hyde Park a series of air-raid shelters; Kensington Gardens and St. James's Park showing anti-aircraft guns among the flowers; friends who served as "air-raid wardens," and explained to her how to adjust the gas-mask; relations leaving their London homes for the safer countryside; and this gas-mask, an ever-present reminder of the dangers threatening her countrymen.

"I wanted to stay over there and do what I could to help," she said. "But what can one woman do? My place was here with my husband."

One good thing she noticed, in the evacuation of children from London the day she sailed. "So many of them were slum children, who had never seen the country before," she said. "It will be a good thing for them."

Citizens Protest Food Price Rise

The Metropolis View Citizens Association last night voted to protest to President Roosevelt against the recent rise in food prices, at a meeting in the Crosby-Noyes School.

Four members were nominated for president, William Higdon, William McGee, N. E. Phillips and George E. Miller. Peter Rosch and W. B. Hopkins were nominated for vice president, Alphonseo Rector and Mrs. Virginia Higdon for secretary, and Miss Mildred Archer for treasurer.

Automatic Elevation, Abolition of So-Called 'Average Clause' Also Are Sought

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 13.—The American Federation of Government employes, in a busy night session, agreed on approximately half of its legislative program for the next year, urging in part:

A $1,500 minimum salary for all full-time employes; automatic promotions; abolition of the so-called "average clause" that, the employes contend, restricts promotions in grade, and extension of the classification act to the field service. A lengthy report on an employe retirement system will be taken up by the convention tomorrow.

President Charles I. Stengle, retiring tomorrow, tonight received a big ovation for his services to the organization. The executive council was authoribed to tender him a $150 present for his good work in the last three years.

To Elect Officers Today

The eighth annual convention winds up tomorrow with an election of officers. Many will lay any odds on:

Cecil E. Custer, of Washington, for president; Charles T. Hoffman, of Washington, for treasurer, succeeding Custer, and James G. Yaden, of Washington, for vice president, succeeding Hoffman.

St. Paul, Minn., seems leading in popularity for the 1941 convention, with St. Louis and Louisville second and third, respectively. The delegates, at the moment, are preening themselves over the kind words Civil Service Commissioner Harry B. Mitchell said today about Government employes in a speech taken as an answer to Attorney General Murphy's recent assertion that 1,000,000 Federal, State and local employes could be fired and $1,000,000,000 saved.

Mitchell Cheered

"We all agree that waste and inefficiency should be eliminated, and that public affairs should be conducted on an economical basis, but so long as the people of the United States order, through their representatives that certain services shall be performed for them by the governments they have established, it is unfair to criticize the servants of the Government because these services are costing a lot of money," he concluded under a volley of whoops.

Then James M. Campbell, of Cincinnati, a vice president and candidate for president, urged the perennial question of whether vice presidents should be elected by district departments, a proposition the Washington A. F. G. E. leaders regard as rank poison. As in past years, Yaden opposed it vehemently oratorically, and it finally was voted down by roll call in which one delegate charged that another delegate had voted five times. The gavel crashed, and Col. Charles I. Stengle, who retires as president tomorrow, retorted that some few delegates are authorized to vote for as many as five lodges. The accuser took his seat. "We will proceed," said Stengle.

Acts Against Subversiveness

The federation adopted a resolution to prevent subversive activities in its precincts. Any member contriving or affiliated with any group that aims at the overthrow of the American constitutional form of government shall be immediately ousted from the A. F. G. E., and any lodge failing to expel the offender will be relieved of its charter, the resolution held.

Another resolution would bring to light any charges placed against Federal employes in the secret files kept by some agencies and departments. The accused would be given chance to answer and if the accuser's allegations were sustained, the answer of the accused would nevertheless be embalmed in the records.

The federation intends to fight heatedly for enactment of the Ramspeck bill (H. R. 960) extending the Civil Service

Rabbi Pleads For Courage In New Year

Dr. Gerstenfeld Sounds Keynote of Rosh Hashanah For 20,000 Here

An impassioned plea for moral courage—instead of military might—to build the "world of tomorrow" rang through the Washington Hebrew Temple at sundown yesterday, as worshipers joined 20,000 local brethren in ushering in the fifty-eighth century of the Jewish calendar with Rosh Hashanah rites.

Sounding the keynote of addresses scheduled for today and tomorrow in sacred places, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, whose reformed congregation holds one-day rites, advised of the need of that "kind of courage which built these great United States" and that makes aggression hopeless and wars useless.

Meanwhile, the anniversary, the date of which is calculated from the world's creation, according to Hebrew legend, drew felicitations from Secretary of State Hull, and prayers from Jewry asking Divine guidance for the President, Vice President and the Government in general.

"I am happy to extend to our fellow citizens of the Jewish faith my heartfelt congratulations on the occasion of the celebration of the Jewish New Year," commented Hull, "and to express my best wishes for their happiness and well-being in the coming year."

The appeal for the Government and other meditations read by spiritual leaders are contained in the Machzar, a book of prayers used only during Rosh Hashanah, Yom Kippur—Day of Atonement, and other high holidays.

As the principal orthodox groups, such as Adas Israel, which recently celebrated its seventieth anniversary; B'Nai Israel, Ohev Sholom, Southeast Hebrew Congregation, Tifereth Israel, Beth Sholom and others are in solemn assembly, holy day services will be observed for Jewish patients at St. Elizabeths Hospital, the Hebrew Home for the Aged and other institutions.

Orthodox rites, which last two days, or until tomorrow sundown, will begin today about 7 a. m. and continue until 3 p. m., being resumed at sundown.

Quist, Cooke Eliminated In Surprises

Capital Boy Wades Through Rival in 3 Sets; Van Horn, Sabin Also Triumph

By the Associated Press

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Reputations went at a dime a dozen in the national tennis championships today when Adrian Quist, of Australia, and Frankie Parker and Elwood Cooke, of this country's flannel elite, were eliminated in rapid succession in fourth-round matches.

Quist, the most important casualty, tumbled before some inspired play by Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., 11—9, 4—6, 8—6, 6—1. Parker was plastered by Gilbert Hunt, jr., the net-playing terror from Washington, D. C., 6—1, 6—1, 6—1, and Cooke succumbed to the terrific service and forehand drive of Welby Van Horn, of Los Angeles, 6—3, 8—10, 6—4, 7—5.

The crowd in the big concrete horseshoe got one thrill after another as the fame-hungry youngsters knocked off the big shots. The officials back under the marquee weren't so happy because the tournament was left in a fix for headliners.

Sabin Impresses

Sabin acted like he was getting even for being left off our Davis Cup team the way he waded into Quist, hero of the Aussie victory at Merion ten days back. Quist, it will be recalled, trimmed Bobby Riggs in the decisive match for the cup, but he was just another Australian a long way from home when Sabin finished with him. The Portland boy outsteadied Quist from the baseline, rattled his teeth with sharp volleys and in the final set lobbed him to death.

Hunt, who eliminated Riggs from the championships last year, took similar delight in trouncing his Davis Cupper, Parker. He knocked Frankie back on his heels at the outset and never gave him a chance to recover.

Van Horn's victory over Cooke was equally striking. Just turned 19, Welby entered the tournament unranked, unseeded and virtually unsung. Cooke was seeded third on the strength of having reached this year's Wimbledon final against Riggs.

The kid from Los Angeles turned loose an amazing service and forehand drive. He had the crowd standing and yelling, like it used to be when Ellsworth Vines and Don Budge yanked the string on their cannon. Cooke just did the best he could, and when it was over he said he didn't know which had knocked his head off—the service or the forehand—but that he suspected it was a little of both.

Bromwich Survives

Jack Bromwich, of Australia, was the only one of the lower-bracket stars to survive the uprising. He beat Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami, 7—5, 6—1, 6—1, and will run into Gilbert Hunt in the quarter finals on Friday. Van Horn will meet Sabin.

Tomorrow's matches pit Riggs against Harry Hopman, of Australia, and Midshipman Joe Hunt, of Annapolis, against Don McNeil, of Oklahoma City. Hopman qualified today by winning his postponed match with Bryan Grant, jr., 7—5, 7—5, 5—7, 6—3.

In today's women's matches, Helen Jacobs beat Nina Brown, of England, 6—2, 6—2; Valerie Scott, England, beat Helen Bernhard, New York, 4—6, 6—2, 7—5; Sarah P. Fabyan, Boston, beat Catherine Malcolm, California, 6—1, 6—0; Kay Stammers, England, beat Dorothy Workman, Rosemead, Calif., 6—1, 4—6, 7—5, and Dorothy Bundy, Santa Monica, Calif., beat Mrs. F. J. Hammersley, England, 6—1, 6—4.

Dorothy Kirby Gets 72, Tops Western Golf

Atlantan Has 54-Hole Total of 233; Sets Course, Tourney Marks

By the Associated Press

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 13.—A blistering 72 over a sunbaked, windswept course today enabled Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta, Ga., to take the lead at the three-quarter mark of the Women's Western Golf Derby.

Six strokes under the course record and one under the previous tournament record, Miss Kirby's 72 was 5 strokes under women's par and only 2 above men's par. It gave her a 54-holes total of 233.

Long-driving Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., turned in the best nine-hole score of the tournament when she fired a 34, 4 under par, going out. However, trap trouble coming in bogged her down to a 40 and a 54-hole total of 234.

Both Miss Hicks and Miss Kirby broke the old course record of 78, set by Mrs. John W. Taylor, of Evanston, in 1933. The previous Derby record of 73 was set last year by Patty Berg.

Third place was occupied today by chunky 15-year-old Phyllis Otto, of Omaha, Nebr. Her 80 today gave her a total of 240.

Ellamae Williams, Chicago, Illinois State champion, who paced the field yesterday, fell to fourth today when she scored an 83 for for a 54-hole total of 242.

Deadlocked in fifth place were Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, and Edith Estabrooks, of Dubuque, Iowa, whose scores of 75 and 76, respectively, gave them 54-hole totals of 243.

Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., who won the Derby in 1935-36-37, and was runner-up to Patty Berg last year, slipped to sixth place with a total of 244.

Robby's scored nine victories in its eleven matches with Cleveland Park to remain in a game behind in second place, while the youthful Panthers crashed through to a 7-to-4 triumph over a supposedly stronger Shannon-Luchs combination.

Stengel Renamed Bees' Manager For 1940 Season

STENGEL

The Bees were in Chicago today, where they took a 15-to-4 pasting from the Cubs.

Neither this time nor during the three-minute telephone conversation two years ago did Stengel and Quinn discuss financial terms.

Quinn told Stengel he decided against waiting for the team's return from the road trip before making the offer because of "much loose gossip around the country about your going to another major league club."

The Bees owner said he was "perfectly satisfied" with Stengel's work and realized the club had been handicapped by injuries. The Bees now are in seventh place in the National League race.

Gevinson Boxes Kadin at Stadium

Lou Gevinson will step into the welterweight division when he meets Nat Kadin, Polish importation from Canada, in an eight-round match on the card featuring Steve Mamakos, Washington's "Golden Greek," and Kenny LaSalle, third ranking welterweight, Monday night, in Griffith Stadium.

It will be the first fight in the 147-pound class for Gevinson, who has a flock of local admirers. Kadin was signed to meet the southpaw puncher yesterday. Lou started out as a featherweight, grew into the lightweight class and now weighs well over 142, his manager, Matt Twomey, who also handles Mamakos, said.

Mamakos, who lost his No. 5 position on the National Boxing Association's "preferred list" when he lost recently to the Cocoa Kid in Baltimore, will be meeting a veteran of 146 fights in La Salle.

Three N. L. Teams Attend Series Meeting

Chicago, Sept. 13 (AP).—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, said today he has invited representatives of the world champion New York Yankees and three National League clubs to attend the annual World Series meeting in Chicago Friday at 11 a. m. (C.D.T.).

The National League clubs invited were Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago.

Col. Miller Elected President of N. B. A.

Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission, yesterday was elected president of the National Boxing Association, as the three-day convention of the N. B. A. at the Willard Hotel came to a close.

Election of Miller means that chief headquarters of the N. B. A. will be moved to Washington. He succeeds Charles Reynolds, of Providence, R. I.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chairman of the District Boxing Commission and superintendent of Metropolitan Police, was elected to the N. B. A. board of governors for the fourth year. Claude W. Owen, member of the District Commission, was appointed chairman of the N. B. A. revisions of suspensions committee.

Rich Pimlico Special Slated For Nov. 1

Johnstown, Kayak 2d And Challedon Mention As Possbile Starters

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 13.—The Pimlico Special, which last year saw Seabiscuit beat War Admiral in a match race, will be run over the historic Maryland track November 1, Alfred G. Vanderbilt announced today.

While not naming the horses which will be invited to compete, Vanderbilt indicated that early returns from a national poll of sports writers and turfmen favored a race bringing together the best horses of the year rather than a renewal of the Pimlico Cup.

The horses most prominently mentioned as likely to participate are C. S. Howard's Kayak II, winner of the Santa Anita Handicap; William Woodward's Johnstown, victor in the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes; W. L. Brann's Challedon, conqueror of Johnstown in the Preakness and Arlington classic; George D. Widener's Eight Thirty, a sensation at Saratoga, and Townsend B. Martin's Cravat, winner of the Suburban Handicap.

Formal invitations are expected to be extended early next week.

Feller Beats Yanks; Grove Blanks Tigers

Bobby Wins 21st Victory of Season, Beating Champs, 9-4

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 13.—Bobby Feller, the Cleveland fireballer whom Manager Oscar Vitt once was accused of steering around the World Champion Yankees, beat them 9 to 4 today for his twenty-first victory and a sweep of the two-game series for the Indians.

As a result New York's lead in the American League was sliced another full game to 15 lengths over the Boston Red Sox.

The contest sized up at the start as a spectacular slinging duel between Feller and Red Ruffing—the only 20-game winners in the league—and for four innings it lived up to its billing.

Then the Indians tore into Ruffing for three runs in both the fifth and sixth innings and got the same helping off Spurgeon Chandler in the seventh.

Feller continued his mastery over the Yankees for eight innings with three-hit shutout pitching. But he weakened in the ninth to let New York bat all the way around on four hits.

Chicago Outfielder Hits Two Homers; Passeau Holds Boston

Chicago, Sept. 13.—Paced by Hank Leiber's two home runs, the Chicago Cubs went on a hitting spree today and defeated the Boston Bees 15-to-4, in the season's final game between the two teams.

Leiber enjoyed a perfect day at bat, hitting his seventeenth and eighteenth home runs in his first two times up, and then came up with a pair of singles and a walk. Leiber drove in six runs to make Claude Passeau's fourteenth victory an easy chore.

Lefty Gives 4 Hits As Red Sox Beat Detroit by 1-0

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 13.—The veteran Lefty Grove turned in his 1939 masterpiece for the Red Sox today by blanking the Detroit Tigers, 1-0, with a sparkling four-hit performance.

While chalking up his fourteenth victory and the 285th of his career, the aged southpaw forced seven of the Tigers to whiff, denied them a base on balls and capped it all with a perfect day at bat, a single and two passes out of three trips to the plate.

Freddie Hutchinson gave the Sockers seven hits during his seven innings on the mound and in the fifth the crippled home team counted its winning tally when Gene Desautels doubled, went to third on Birdie Tebbetts' poor throw and raced home after Lou Finney lined a sacrifice fly to leftfield.

The Tigers had runners in scoring position with one out in the fourth and ninth but the canny Grove foiled them by making the last two batters pop out in each of those frames.

3 Former Champs Bow In Upsets

Johnny Burke Wins Two Matches; Two Baltimore Entries Lose in 2d Round

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 13.—Slim, dapper Willie Turnesa lost his national amateur golf crown today but got a royal escort to the sidelines as more than a half-dozen other standout favorites—including two former title holders—bowed out of the picture in the tournament's first two rounds of match play.

Turnesa, an easy first round victor over Howard Everitt, of Oreland, Pa., was eliminated during the afternoon by George Dawson, 37-year-old Chicago entry. The outcome of this match climaxed a day marked by the surprise triumphs of long-shots and unknowns.

Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, Nebr., winner of the 1937 amateur title and the national open championship on this course, North Shore, was one of the stars who faded from the scene.

Other Stars Fade

Others were Johnny Fischer, of Cincinnati, winner of the title in 1936; Tom Sheehan, the young Northville, Mich., player who on Monday and Tuesday set a new all time qualifying record of 139 for 36 holes; Pat Abbott, of Pasadena, Calif., the 1938 finalist against Turnesa; Maurice McCarthy, of Cincinnati, second low qualifier, and Charles Yates, of Atlanta, the former British amateur champion.

Bobby Brownell, Duke University golfer from the Manor Club, Norbeck, Md., removed Great Britain's lone representative from the tournament today before suffering elimination in the second round.

Brownell had a fine round in the opening of match play to erase S. B. Roberts, of Prestatyn, Wales, England, 5 and 4. He carded a 1 over par round for the duration of the match against Roberts, having a 37 on the front side when he built up a 2-up lead on his opponent.

Bill Holt Scores

His conqueror in the second round was "Trailer" Bill Holt, of Clay, N. Y., 2 and 1. Just as Brownell was 1 over par in winning over Roberts, so Holt was 1 over par for the 17 holes of his tussle with Brownell.

Holt's 37 on the front side gave him a 2-up margin over Brownell. He increased this to three holes with a birdie 3 on the eleventh and then they halved the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth holes. The collegian braced here for a birdie 4 that cut the advantage again to two holes, but halved holes on the sixteenth and seventeenth and ended the match.

Otto Greiner, of Baltimore, scored one of the major first round upsets, over Frank Strafaci, New York, 2 and 1, but lost in the second round to Melvin Harbert, trans-Miss titleholder, 2 and 1. The third Middle Atlantic representative to make the match play grade Spencer Overton, Baltimore, also lost in the second round, to Dick Chapman, French

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Clark Griffith was not heard to laugh out loud, but it is a safe wager that he at least emitted a mild chuckle at the news from Philadelphia the other day. The news from Philadelphia was brief but very pointed. Boiled down to the nub, the dispatch read: "The Philadelphia Eagles-Pittsburgh Pirates National League football game was postponed today due to threatening weather and unsatisfactory ticket sales."

POVICH

The old gentleman at Griffith Stadium is not the sort of a character to chortle at the obvious misfortune of other parties, but he has a special interest in this matter and may be pardoned if he perceives a bit of a good joke in the postponement of a pro league football game for "unsatisfactory ticket sales."

"Consarn 'em, they have no right to be busting in on the baseball season," Griffith has been saying for a couple of years now. "Summer time is baseball time and September is still a baseball month. We don't trouble those football people in the fall and they shouldn't be rushing the season on us. They're not being fair about it. We'll pass a rule to keep the football people out of our parks until baseball ends."

$22,000 in Revenue Didn't Change Griff's Mind

He still feels that way about it despite the fact that last year the Redskins' six home games at Griffith Stadium produced $22,000 in revenue for the Washington Ball Club, which sheared a neat 15 per cent off the top of all football gates. Even the clink of that kind of coin doesn't influence the old gentleman when he feels that the game he has lived for 52 years is periled by the intrusion of pro football.

So, we imagine, it is with pardonable glee that Griffith notes the developments at Philadelphia. "People aren't football minded at this time of year," he has been saying, perhaps more hopefully than truthfully, and here at hand is evidence that he may be correct.

Anyway, the best that pro football can get out of the Eagles-Pittsburgh postponement is a horrible black eye. It is no flattering commentary on the pro league that this particular game was postponed. Why the league ever permitted it to be called off is a mystery if it is agreed that the league bosses are not downright stupid but rather practical men.

Scheduled for last Sunday, the game was to be the grand opening of the Eagles in the league race. And it was to be the unveiling, too, of the most-publicized football player of his time, Davey O'Brien. It had all the trappings of a natural, a gala opening in which the public could gaze for the first time on little Davey as a pro football star.

Evidence That Pro-Leagues Are Rushing Season

The postponement was tantamount to an admission by the league that folks are not excited about pro football at this time of year. And if threatening weather rather than "unsatisfactory ticket sales" was emphasized as the chief excuse, that is something of a laugh. Football is supposed to be played in any sort of weather, pro football particularly.

There is additional evidence, however, that the pro football people are rushing the season and attempting to create a clientele at a season of the year when folks are not ready for the game. September 10 was the date they chose for the league openers and it is significant that on the afternoon when the Philadelphia game was called off, only 15,000 saw the Detroit Lions play the Chicago Cardinals at Detroit.

On a crowd of 15,000, a high-salaried team like Detroit with tremendous overhead expenses, is fortunate to break even. At Philadelphia, there apparently wasn't enough money in the house to pay the Pittsburgh club the visiting team's guarantee of $5,000. But if the league people had been a bit bright they would have ordered the game played nevertheless, pocketed their losses and at least upheld the dignity of the league.

Picture That Confronts Redskins None Too Bright

On the face of what happened in Boston the other evening, the picture that confronts the Redskins is none too bright. Explanations are in order inasmuch as the Eastern College All Stars, which failed to score a point against the New York Giants, scored 27 points against the Redskins. That fact is scarcely a comfort to the Redskins' bosses who can recall only too painfully the woeful defense of last season.

But Coach Ray Flaherty is refusing to show any great concern, nevertheless. "You can toss out that Boston game," said Flaherty succinctly. "It doesn't mean anything. We had a lot of green kids in there on two of those All Star touchdowns. It wasn't our regular team."

All of which does not explain away the fact that the Collegians marched 70 yards downfield and bucked the ball over the goal within 6 minutes after the game started, at a time when the Redskins were playing their regulars. It smacks painfully of 1938.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 13 (INS).—One year ago today two so-so heavyweights named Bob Pastor and Lou Nova each got a break.

Pastor's break was the more spectacular. He broke the skin encasing his shin, and darn near the shin itself, by accidentally belting himself with an axe. He was in training to fight Gunnar Barlund at the time, but the self-inflicted wound was so deep that he had to default. Nova, then recently beaten by old Maxie Rosenbloom, got the break and was appointed Bob's stand-in.

CONSIDINE

Barlund had gained a lot of false prominence by hitting big Buddie Baer often enough to make the fellow quit. The profession knew that Barlund was an easy bleeder and if solidly tagged would be cut up by any moderately good man. Nova, after being knocked down, did just that, and the fight was awarded to him in the seventh, because of Barlund's excessive bleeding.

The wheels of a remarkable fighting career had begun to spin in earnest, if purely by accident. Two and a half months after he beat the vulnerable, and spuriously famous, Barlund, Nova beat Tommy Farr, who, it was soon apparent, was about 50 per cent of the Welshman who had stood up 15 rounds against Louis. But at the time he beat Farr it was hailed as a great upset, and Nova's stock boomed.

Last June he beat the remains of Max Baer. They stopped the fight in the eleventh after Baer's cuts (and his inability to hurt Nova with his right) had filled the sappy warrior with despair. Lou had added another slightly dandruffy scalp to his belt. But, the times being what they are in the heavyweight division, the scalps made him the No. 1 challenger, gave him close to $50,000 and put him in line for perhaps a million dollars more.

But the curious thing about this comparatively simple progress to the contender's spot is the change these rather soft touches made in Nova's outlook on the fight game. The naivete which was a part of him when he was accidentally shoved into his big chance has been replaced with a well-bred sneer, probably pardonable, for the merit of the division.

Today Nova sincerely believes that Louis is the bum whose downfall he will bring about at the very end of a fistic march that is irrevocably tied up with destiny. The contempt he holds for Galento is beyond words. It is so great that his handlers, who are finding him tougher to handle with the passing months, have had trouble getting him to train hard for Friday night's fight.

Nova, with every match, has learned something physically. He is still at what might be called the impressionable age of his boxing life, for he has had only 27 fights. It is conceivable that in five years he will be better than he is today. He reaches his quick crest with a pretty fair armor. He knows how to box. And, though he can never be a pulverizing puncher, he hits hard and often enough to knock out anybody.

If there is a hitch in his orderly progress to the championships, and that pot of gold, it will be caused by the fact that his ego has developed faster than his physical skill. He fairly dared Baer to hit him on the chin, and Max did frequently enough to make a lot of us believe he was going to kayo Nova in the third or fourth round. Unless all signs fail he will dare Galento, the man who knocked down Joe Louis, to try to do the same thing.

What we think will happen is that Galento will hit him with everything and that Nova, between dares, will box Tony adeptly enough to open on Tony's hemstitched face the same kind of ax wounds which started Nova's strange career.

Steps Into Breach With 2-Hit Game; Medwick's Homer Beats Philadelphia

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 13.—Taking a lot of strain off a pitching staff which for winning purposes had been reduced to two men, Eugene (Junior) Thompson bobbed up today with a two-hit pitching job to shut out the Brooklyn Dodgers, 3 to 2, for the Cincinnati Reds.

His flashing performance preserved a 3½ game lead over the St. Louis Cardinals, who edged out the Phillies.

The only hits permitted by the rookie right-hander were Johnny Hudson's single to rightfield in the third and a bunt that Dixie Walker beat out in the eighth. Each came after two were out and the Dodgers never got a runner to second base.

In the face of this masterful showing, Hugh Casey, the Dodgers' own rookie star with a record of six straight victories, didn't have a chance.

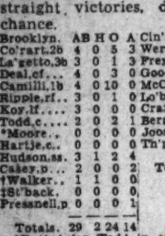
Gumbert Gives 2 Hits; Giants, Pirates Split

Pittsburgh, Sept. 13.—Harry Gumbert bedecked his 1939 pitching record with a two-hit performance against the Pirates today, to give the New York Giants a 2-to-1 shutout in the first of a doubleheader, but Pittsburgh offset this with a 7-to-4 victory in the nightcap.



GUMBERT

In the first game, Gumbert's fifteenth triumph, the only runs came on a single by Harry Danning with the bases filled in the seventh.

Arky Vaughan, batting in three runs with a pair of singles, led the Pirates' attack against Cliff Melton in the second game, which was recorded as Bob Klinger's thirteenth win, although he had to be helped out of a troublesome jam in the ninth.

Joe's Clout Comes With One on Base; St. Louis Remains 3½ Games Behind

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 13.—For the second straight day the Cardinals trailed Philadelphia into the stretch then nosed them out with a home run.

Slugging Joe Medwick's drive into the bleachers at the 400-foot mark with one man on in the eighth climaxed today's 17-hit struggle and gave the Redbirds a 10-to-9 victory necessary to keep them in the thick of the pennant scrap with Cincinnati.

Bill McGee, who went in in the eighth, was credited with the win, while the loss was charged to Ike Pearson, who only yesterday was beaten 4-3 despite the fact he held the Cards to only five hits. He was inserted at the start of the eighth in an effort to hold the one-run advantage.

Nats Stretch Losing Streak to 6 in Row

Chase Bows in 11-Inning Duel With Lyons, 3-1; Rookies Beaten by Chisox, 4-2, in Abbreviated Finale

By Shirley Povich.

The Nats stepped up production of their losing streak yesterday with two more defeats leaving the assembly line. Consecutive defeat No. 5 was an 11-inning job in favor of the White Sox, 3 to 1, and later in the afternoon the Nats turned out consecutive defeat No. 6, an eight-inning model, curtailed because of darkness. The score of that one was 4-2.

After Ken Chase lost his overtime pitching duel with ancient Ted Lyons in the opener, with the help of a grievous muff by Cecil Travis, Manager Bucky Harris caught a whiff of the football weather and sent out a new team for the second half. But the result was almost the same.

The team that Harris put on the field for the second game was a motley collection of green rookies from the Nats' Class B clubs. Hal Quick, of Greenville, made his Griffith Stadium debut at shortstop; Morris Aderholt, of Charlotte, played his first big league game at second base, and the battery of Early Wynn and Al Evans was an all-Charlotte affair.

Aderholt Gets 2 Hits

The lone young man of the freshman group to distinguish himself was the husky Aderholt, who collected two of the Nats' seven hits off Jack Knott. Aderholt's first hit was a mere routine single to right field, but his second hit deserves a separate paragraph.

It was a colossal home run, the longest ball driven over the Griffith Stadium right field this season. Stepping into one of Knott's pitches in the seventh inning, Aderholt slugged the ball full over the middle of the scoreboard in right center to the glee of the slim gathering which braved the frigid afternoon.

On the face of the figures, Wynn did a tolerable pitching job of it in holding the White Sox to four runs in his first big league appearance, but those are not all the facts. It seems before Umpire-in-Chief Kolls decided to call the game on account of the gathering darkness, the White Sox had jolted Wynn loose from three runs in the ninth, only to lose credit for them when the game was stopped.

For seven innings the Nats held a 1-0 advantage in the opener, achieved in the first inning when Welaj beat out an infield hit, went to second on a passed ball, to third on Lewis' infield out, and scored on Sammy West's long fly to leftfield.

In achieving his thirteenth win of the year, Lyons pitched ten consecutive scoreless innings after the first. He walked only two batters in contrast to Chase's nine, and in the last five innings he permitted the Nats only one hit—Wright's

All in their teens, they are George Larmore, Jim Vaubel, Herbert Lewis and Maurice Brokering.

Farnsworth Runs Second At Aqueduct

Mrs. Payne Whitney's 3-Year-Old Clocked In 1:16 3-5 to Equal Mark Set by Gold Flay

By the Associated Press.

Aqueduct, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Equaling Gold Flag's track record of 1:16 3-5 for 6½ furlongs, Mrs. Payne Whitney's 3-year-old Third Degree today scored a scintillating triumph in the Bay Shore Handicap, which attracted a dozen of the fastest sprinters in the country to the post. Tenth at the break, the Questionnaire stretch runner gradually worked his way forward and easily ran over the leaders with a thrilling burst of speed on the outside, Paying 9 to 2, Third Degree won by a length and a half, to collect a purse of $5,850.

The Tall Trees Stable's Bill Farnsworth, claimed from Mrs. G. C. Winfrey for $6,800 when he won the Woodmere Claiming Stakes here nine days ago, turned in his usual honest performance, to finish second, three lengths before W. E Boeing's Wise Barrister.

El Chico, coupled with Our Mat as the William Ziegler, jr., entry, and favorite at 13 to 5, once again failed to make good. Carrying top weight of 126 pounds, the little colt raced close enough to the leaders to hold a winning chance, but simply was not there when the question was asked. He wound up sixth. Preceptor II, the South American star that came here with two Narragansett victories behind him, showed the Binglin silks of Bing Crosby and Lin Howard for the first time on a New York track. He made up some ground, to finish fifth.

At Montpelier, Va., when members of the Virginia Foxhound Club recently met at the palatial estate of Mrs. Marian duPont Scott, where annual bench show was held, they had an opportunity to see Battleship, noted steeplechase star, who carried the duPont colors to victory in the English Grand National. The 12-year-old jumper is enjoying a life of retirement in the spacious paddocks at the duPont farm

SELECTIONS AT TIMONIUM.

Dear Al:

Well, this is "get away" day here and the final show on the Maryland half-milers, closing one of the best seasons the merry-go-round tracks have experienced. Anything can happen today and probably will. Friday and Saturday are off days as far as Maryland tracks are concerned, but this will be just the calm before the storm, for on Monday the big time swings into action at Havre de Grace. Laurel follows the Graw with its month of October meeting, then it will be Pimlico for two weeks, Bowie for two weeks and then the closing meeting in this area at good old Charles Town. The totalizator has done much to pep up the half mile meetings. Both crowds and betting have gone up and, with the "tote" installed all around the mile circuits there should be a continued wave of prosperity. Havre de Grace is making ready for more business by installing a dozen new ticket windows in the clubhouse. Much interest in the Graw meeting will center in the return to Old Line competition of Challedon. The W. L. Brann colt's last appearance in the State was his smashing victory in the Preakness. Since that race the pride of the Glade Valley Farm has about clinched the 3-year-old championship. He has passed the $200,000 mark in winnings and is said to be as sound as a bell of brass. Much is expected of him in Maryland. Last year he first flashed the form that led to greatness in the three futurities, winning the New England, Maryland and Pimlico classics in excellent style. When he took a beating in his first Maryland start this year and then went on to be second to Johnstown in the Kentucky Derby critics shook their heads. However, Trainer Lou Schaefer and Owner Brann had faith in the son of Challenger II. They didn't alibi, but they did say, "Wait until the next time." The "next time" was the Preakness. Challedon is generally regarded as a "fall" horse which should make him all the more effective around the Maryland tracks. It is too bad that there isn't a War Admiral or a Seabiscuit in training in the East. This would make a brilliant autumn hereabouts for the customers. Well, at any rate, it's the curtain on Timonium and the half-milers today. BILL.

First race—Wale Signal seems the best suited of the juveniles gathered for the first race. Has all his speed and needs only the right ride. Doctor's Nurse is far down the list but will be dangerous if in action. Negopi has worked well and could cause a major upset.

Second race—Small Change had a rough trip last out. Changes riders for this and may carry the 118-pound assignment to victory. Did She is fairly solid and belongs with this kind. Mud would help Blue Prelude and Beacon Queen.

Third race—Iissamaid has that speed on the flat to serve him well after getting around the jumps. Seems headed for another set of brackets in this company. Tam O'Shanter won that last after a struggle and should be prominent.

Fourth race—Circus Lights was kidding last out and failed to get up a gallop. Tackles maidens in this field and it may be the spot for a crack down. Stuck Up turned in a nice race last out and is due to be a threat. Deodo for the minor award.

Fifth race—Lula Khayyam has all her speed now and appears ready to turn back this gang. Gets a light assignment, and C. Kirk should take care of the riding. The Pearce entry of Royal Upset and Welsh Lad is entitled to consideration. Brainchild should be in the pay circlle.

Sixth race—Highland Song gets in with 104 pounds, and I understand Don Hamer will do the riding. This one has a bit of class that may bring victory. Timber Lady returns to the half-milers after shining in the Middle West. However, she may run out. Traumerei is not outclassed at the short route.

Seventh race—Eblis is returning to best form and should take care of this company. Sun Sweep is fit and will be better suited on an off track. Last Revue is fit as hands make horses, and is due some respect.

Eighth race—Bosopi has gotten off poorly in recent starts. This one can do a lot of front running and could take the top and stay there. Western Run and Lucky Turn to take care of the place and show positions.

Best bet—Itsamaid.

Heurich Held to 12-Inning, 4-4 Tie in N.A.B.F. Tourney

By Bill Burnett

Johnny De Bettencourt had to be satisfied with a 4-4 tie yesterday as he sought his third victory in three days for the Heurich Brewers in the National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament.

Relieving Ed Colliflower in the seventh inning, De Bettencourt held the Barberton (Ohio) Killian Celtics scoreless for the next seven innings while his mates overcame a 4-3 disadvantage. The game was called because of darkness in the last half of the thirteenth, with one Celtic out and nobody on base. The outcome forced Heurich into a doubleheader today, the first being a playoff of the deadlock on the Ellipse at 11 a. m.

Victor over Dayton's Frigidaires in a relief role Tuesday, and over Pontiac, Mich., Monday in nine innings, De Bettencourt was easily the star of Heurich's performance yesterday. And in the ninth inning, after the Beermen had staged a belated rally to knot the count on a single, an error on Barberton's shortstop and a squeeze play, De Bettencourt came within 1 inch of winning his own game at bat. He hit a screamer to center, which the Celtic's Huxley raced in to catch on his shoestrings.

Rallies to Tie Score

As has been its custom in games to date, Heurich was forced to come from far behind to even earn a draw. It took a very temporary 1-run lead in the first half of the opening inning, but saw the score tied when Barberton had finished its turn at the plate.

A shaky mound duel between Colliflower and Shomoch lasted until the fifth inning, when the Celtics jumped into a 4-1 lead. Shomoch dropped a single in left field as a starter, moved to second on Harwell's walk and scored on Vincent's single. Ruthenberg's powerful double sent Harwell home, but it was a tough break for Heurich that pushed Vincent over later. Dick Knight's throw home took an outlandish hop in front of the plate and wound up somewhere in the crowd.

Meet Again Today

The two teams will pair off today, this time at 9:30, on the South Ellipse, to attempt a settlement of their deadlock. If Heurich wins it goes against Birmingham's Jordan Pirates in the afternoon. If not—well, Barberton goes up against Detroit's defending champions.

One of the stiffest battles it has had to date was given Detroit's Altes Lager Club by Birmingham yesterday, but it remained the only undefeated team in the tourney anyway. It edged out a 6-to-4 decision with a rally that stretched over three innings. The game was won in the eighth when 2 runs developed out of Borovich's single, Hogg's sacrifice, on which he was safe, a passed ball and Kalapinski's single to left center.

amateur champion, 4 and 2, after eliminating Alex Walsh, Rockford, Ill., 5 and 4.

Dawson, who was a semi-finalist in the 1926 National Amateur tournament, defeated Robert Clark, of Edgewater, Colo., 4 and 3, during the first round and started off as though he would score a second rout over Turnesa. But the young champion three down after six holes, rallied strongly to make it a battle to the finish.

Dawson went one up at the sixteenth when Turnesa's shot out of a trap barely made the green. They halved the seventeenth. On the final hole, Dawson was on the green nicely in two and Turnesa, blowing his chance to stay in the running, put his second to the right of the green, finally winding up with a five to Dawson's par four.

Goodman lost in the second round, 1 down, to Don Schumacher, 23-year-old star from Dallas, Tex. Goodman took bogie 5s on the final two holes as Schumacher played perfect golf for two pars.

Fischer Also Loses

Fischer also was a second-round victim, losing 3 and 2 to Gordon Kummer, a 31-year-old electrical contractor from Milwaukee, who never has won a big-time title.

Sheehan, who had brilliant qualifying rounds of 70 and 69; was cooled off in the first round, losing, 3 and 2, to Kean Donnelly, an unknown from Philadelphia.

Abbott and McCarthy also went out in the opening round, Abbott bowing to John P. Burke, of Rye, N. Y., 2 and 1, and McCarthy being decisioned by Henry J. Kowal, of Hamilton, N. Y., 3 and 2.

Yates, one of several young stars expected to bid strongly for the crown, lost, 1 down, in the final match of the day to Ed Kingsley, of Salt Lake City, Utah, a semifinalist in the 1938 tournament.

The only former champion surviving the day's blast of unexpected results was C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, the Canadian veteran, who won the title in 1932. He defeated T. R. Johnston, of Philadelphia, 6 and 5, and then polished off Joe Lynch, of Canton, Mass., 4 and 2.

Marvin (Bud) Ward, the Spokane, Wash., star, who almost won the National Ope nthis summer, also remained in the running. He had a close call this morning, finally defeating Eddie Held, of Edgewater, Colo., 1 up in 20 holes—the only extra hole match of the day—and then eliminated Chris Brinke, of Birmingham, Mich., 6 and 5.

Dick Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn., who reached the 1938 semifianls, also advanced to the third round, as did Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., a finalist against Goodman in 1936 at Portland, Oreg.

Galento, Nova Ready to Battle

Tony's Thin Skin Worry To Jacobs

Pilot Wants Referee To Disregard Spilling Of Blood; $100,000 Gate Now in Prospect

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 13.—Topping off the end of training for Tony Galento and Lou Nova, Manager Joe Jacobs today asked the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission to instruct Referee George Blake not to stop the 15-round fight Friday night for blood-spilling unless one of the managers requests it.

With the bout in Municipal Stadium only two days off and Blake already fully informed as to the Pennsylvania rules, Commission Chairman Leon Rains wasn't at all sure he would ask the arbiter to do anything of the kind. Blake was imported from California especially for the tea party, Rains pointed out, and he is experienced enough to know when a man's face is carved not wisely but too well.

Special Cut Remedy

"But I still would like to have Blake told not to stop it if Tony's cut unless I ask him to," Jacobs insisted. "I have a special cut remedy, imported from France, and I don't want the referee to interfere in the middle of a round before we have a chance to work on any cut in the corner. I know Galento can be cut, but that doesn't affect his fighting."

With 48 hours still to go most signs pointed tonight to a gate somewhat short of the rose-colored $150,000 estimate at first expected. "However," one official explained, "the sale on the cheaper tickets has been going pretty well in the last few days, so we may yet go over the $100,000 mark.

Galento and Nova both wound up sparring work yesterday and lightly tapered off today. The two-ton gent from Jersey, down to a mere 231, lighter even that for his recent disastrous challenge against Joe Louis' heavyweight crown, still figures he can stop the ex-collegian from California in less than half the scheduled 15 rounds.

invites all to join and is under obligation to no one," Miller said. "If boxing is saddled with a czar because the needed co-operation has not been achieved it will not be the fault of the N. B. A."

The new ratings committee includes Triner, Reynolds, Bohn, Green, Dave Rochon, of Montreal, Canada; Frank Coskey, of Connecticut; Maj. John J. Ahern, of Minnesota; Dr. E. J. Barnes, of Ohio; Joseph Maloney, of New Jersey; James Blake, of Virginia; Stanley Scher, of Maryland; Joe Kundschik, of Texas; Johnson S. Mattingly, sr., of Kentucky.

New Dusek Test Tonight for Singh; Arena Mat Scene

WAGNER

The Hindu disposed of brother Emil last week with his cobra clutch but lost to brother Ernie two weeks ago. Rudy's victory over Jack Hader last week forbodes nothing but ill for the squatty deathlock artist—as a matter of fact, the local wrestling observers observed yesterday that Rudy is looking more like the Rudy of ten years ago when he was inciting real Grade A riots in rings throughout the Nation.

The semifinal pits Abie Coleman against Juan Ologuival, while Hader, once more relegated to the preliminaries, meets a newcomer, "Bad Boy" Brown, of Texas. Bob Wagner meets Gene Gagonne, and Alan Eustace meets Tommy Rae.

Varied Film Fare Promised For Next Week

Four New Features Make Their Bows; Others Amusements

Earle

"ANGELS WASH THEIR FACES." Ann Sheridan and the "Dead End" kids have the top roles in this new film, which concerns the unjust imprisonment of one of the erstwhile "tough guys" and the inspiring specatcle of the "oomph" girl in a sympathetic part. Ronald Reagan, Frankie Thomas, Eduardo Ciannelli, Bonita Granville, Henry O'Neill and Jackie Searle have other leading roles. During "Boys' Week," the kids take over the management of a city. "Fun Frolics," the stage revue, features the Slate Brothers with Fay Carroll; the Five Jansleys; the Quintones; Sunny Rice and the Roxyettes in new routines, including "Pardon My Gloves," a boxing divertissement. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"THE UNDER-PUP." Marking the debut of Gloria Jean, an eleven-year-old newcomer, this new comedy features a cast that includes Robert Cummings, Nan Grey, Beulah Bondi, C. Aubrey Smith, Virginia Weidler, Margaret Lindsay and Billy Gilbert. Miss Jean is the widely heralded successor to the "aging" Deanna Durbin. Her first role is that of the winner of a trip to an exclusive girls' camp. The youngster very quickly shows her mettle. The new "March of Time," "Soldiers With Wings," also is on the bill. Opens tomorrow morning.

Palace

"THE STAR MAKER." Bing Crosby plays, sings and dances the part of Gus Edwards in a new musical film, which also serves to introduce to the public a new girl singer, Linda Ware. In this recitation of events, which bring about a concert by the 14-year-old Miss Ware, with Walter Damrosch leading the Los Angeles orchestra, her songs bring success to a man already worn out from trying. Louise Campbell plays the patient wife and Laura Hope Crews, Ned Sparks and a large company of children are important in the support. Old songs and new, by Edwards himself, form the score. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"GOLDEN BOY." This screen adaption of the Cliff Odets' drama comes to the "Met" after a week at the Earle. The story revolves around a young violinist who enters the fight game to win fame and fortune. Barbara Stanwyck, William Holden and, Adolph Menjou are starred. Opens tomorrow morning.

In Ascendant

GERALDINE FITZGERALD to be seen soon on a local screen in "A Child Is Born," in which she is said to match her fine work in "Dark Victory" and "Wuthering Heights"

Trans-Lux

"DANZIG." The trouble spot of the European embroglio, is the central short feature at the newsreel theater for the coming week. The travelogue will be supported by "Polar Trappers," Walt Disney cartoons, and "Death Valley Thrills." Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"LADY OF THE TROPICS." Hedy LaMarr and Robert Taylor are the costars in this recent Capitol Theater success. "THE DRUNKARD." The Roadside players have added an extra week to their revival of the Barnum temperance play, thus setting the closing of the straw-hat theater season for a week from Saturday. Eugene Kressin, Ralph Fowler, Lansing Hall, Ted Tiller and Betty Gray are the Roadsiders of importance.

Gayety

"ROCKIN' THE TOWN." Mary Joyce and Bob Carney are the stars of the new burlesque production which opens on Sunday afternoon. Johnny Barry and Sammy Spears top the supporting cast, which includes Dian Burton, Margie White, the Carney Twins and a beauty chorus of youthful dancers.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 13.

LAST WEEK the executive board of the American Federation of Musicians held their regular meeting in New York . . . For the first time in years Walter Murdock, who represents the Canadian affiliate, was absent . . . The enlisted Murdock, however, sent a telegram of regret, explaining his absence: "Sorry cannot attend. Am having some trouble with a German non-union painter."

MILLICENT ROGERS BALCOM, former wife of Count Salm, will return to this country next week . . . Sophie Tucker, who almost was responsible for a strike by all American entertainers, because she sided with Ralph Whitehead, last night declared: "I'm still with Whitehead, and never will change" . . . Heywood Broun's Nutmeg will continue publication—because Broun bet the paper's last $10 on a horse named Nelly Bly, at Aqueduct, and it came in—at 50 to 1. . . . Lillian Taiz, wife of Sam Jaffe—the screen actor whose last appearance was in "Gunga Din"—will make her debut in grand opera. She'll have the Marguerite role in "Faust," with the New York Opera Co.

OSCAR LEVANT read some of the reports that he is affianced to June Gale . . . Miss Gale is in Hollywood now, and so Levant telephoned her . . . Her sister answered the telephone and told Oscar that June refuses to speak to him . . . "I don't blame her," Levant replied, "but this is a long-distance call and I'm paying for 3 minutes anyway—so put somebody on the phone . . . June's sister obliged and got somebody to talk to Levant until 3 minutes had expired.

Harold W. Sullivan, the Boston attorney, theatens to hurl a suit at Robert Freer, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission . . . Spec. Pros. John Amen yesterday subpenaed the Trinity Hospital nurse who will be the key witness in his abortion-racket investigation . . . Ferdinand Kuhn, jr., who covered all the recent European crises for the N. Y. Times, is on his way home now—for a rest cure . . . Collier's magazine is sending W. P. Courtney and Martha Gellhorn to Europe to cover the war . . . Renee de Marco, who spends her vacations doing volunteer nurse work, is deciding between Hollywood and a nursing job in London.

GEORGE OPPENHEIMER, the screen writer, wrote a mystery thriller and sat with his executive producer while the movie was unreeled in the studio projection room . . . When the lights went up, Oppenheimer saw the grim look on the producer's face and asked: "Well, what do you think?" . . . "I don't know, George," the producer confessed. "I don't think it scared me enough—and if it doesn't scare me, I don't think it'll scare anybody" . . . "You're wrong," Oppenheimer sighed, "I'll bet it scares the hell out of my agent."

EUGENE LYONS, author of "Assignment in Utopia," will become a radio commentator for WMCA. He'll broadcast about the international situation four times weekly . . . The Orange Bowl game in Miami this year will have a tieup with MGM in a hunt for a "Peter Pan Girl" . . . John L. Lewis visited with Senator Burton K. Wheeler last week, supporting the rumors of Lewis backing him next year.

GEORGE JESSEL now is telling this about his Hollywood experiences . . . When Universal signed him for $1,500 a week, Jessel received no assignment for six months . . . None of the officials answered his calls and he received no visitors—until Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt came to his office to say good-by before going to Honolulu . . . Five minutes after Vanderbilt left, Jessel was called to the office of an executive . . . "That's a fine thing," Jessel spouted, "A. G. Vanderbilt had to visit me before anybody would call to give me an assignment" . . . "It's not about an assignment," George was assured. "I want to know—did he give you a tip on any of the races at Santa Anita today?"

THE Billy Skidmore income-tax indictment in Chicago will end just there. No further prosecution of the gambling inquiry is expected. . . . When Mike Romanoff announced that he was leaving California to join the French Foreign Legion, Herman Mankiewicz told him: "Under the rules of civilized warfare, the Germans will have to demobilize four divisions to equalize this" . . . Romanoff, incidentally, has brought a libel suit—for the first time in his career . . . "I'd like to know," he explained, "what it's like to be a plaintiff, for a change" . . . By all means see "End of the Day" at the Filmarte—the best movie in town.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 13.—Is Metro lucky? Someone there must have second sight. Maybe it's George Seitz, who has directed all the Hardy pictures except one. He's just turned out the Wally Berry picture, "Thunder Afloat" which is being rushed into release because it's actually a picture of what's going on today—sinking of submarines. They give names of nations, and reveal the fact that even the Germans wouldn't go into what they called "The Ash Can Fleet," which was the most dangerous part of the service.

HOPPER

With Goldwyn cancelling "Raffles" day after it started, because David Niven had to leave for the front, people are asking if Jimmy Roosevelt hasn't become the most important man in town? I understand it's Jimmy who went to British consul and asked delay for David's trip, figuring that throwing hundreds of people out of work and winning the goodwill of an industry meant more than rushing one man into battle, possibly to stop a bullet.

Clarence Brown paid Marjorie Rambeau a great compliment by saying she could recite three pages out of the telephone book and make it sound like "Madame X."

Couldn't find out if it was Greg Ratoff, but a well-known Russian when he first arrived in this country became the press agent for a Flea Circus. But fleas took a fancy to his beard, and they doubled his salary. 'Cause he kept them safe at night.

Ben Frank, who used to greet our movie stars at the Ambassador is now saying "hello" to former president Hoover at the Biltmore, just after he bid farewell to J. Edgar Hoover.

Madge Evans, I mean Mrs. Sidney Kingsley, says when you're not working here, join the straw-hat circuit. "I not only met my husband back there but have already read 20 plays, and can afford to wait a year until a good one shows up." One of the funniest was a play with two third-acts—one in case of war, the other if we stay out!

Frances Mercer, last seen in "The Castles" will be in the new Jerry Kern-Hammerstein musical on Broadway, opposite Jack Whiting, Doug. Jr.'s, step-father.

Now Dietrich has mastered the art of rolling her own cigarettes. But won't be satisfied till she gets Mae West hip-roll in rhythm, too.

When Winnie Shaw refused to sing a request number for one of our stars, she explained that it used to be part of her repertoire, until a gangster in Atlantic City outlied a gun, told her to keep right on. She did, for an hour and a half—has never sung it since!

You'll be glad to hear that Duncan Renaldo, who has had such miserable luck, has a new contract at Republic, as a result of his first picture "The Kansas Terror."

Astrologist Norvell told Arleen Whalen she shouldn't marry for two years. After hearing that, she went right out lunching with Alex D'Arcy.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Hollywood Production Is Speeded Up by the War

Studios Recover Quickly From First Shock; Madeleine Carroll Is Washington Visitor; This, That and the Other About the Theater

AS CALMER COUNSEL supplants the excitement of war's initial impact, it becomes increasingly apparent that the effect of the European conflict upon Hollywood's film production is going to be less than was at first believed.

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, was first to declare that his company would meet the emergency by drastic economies in operating costs rather than in curtailment of the announced production schedule. It was the view of W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, that the European war will speed up motion picture production rather than occasion any curtailment. He cites a reasonably self-evident truth when he says, "Hollywood is the only movie spot in the world where film production goes on unhampered. England, France and South America still want more pictures."

BELL

So now comes Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures. "There will be no deviation from our regular production program," says Mr. Cohn, "with the sole exception of a temporary postponement of 'Arizona' for a period of 60 days. I have instructed all our producers, directors and writers that 'full speed ahead' is the working slogan at Columbia. We are not pulling in any horns. As a matter of fact, we are spending $5,000,000 more on Columbia product this year than at any time in our organization's history."

And that is the way it seems to be going.

In a recent discussion of the subject matter utilized in "Nurse Edith Cavell" and "Thunder Afloat," this column suggested that numerous other films of a similar nature inevitably would follow to keep pace with the sudden shift in public interest. That seems to be borne out by Mr. Cohn's expressed belief that one of the immediate effects of the war will be to cause a change in the trend of screen stories.

"For example," he points out, "we look for great things from Capra's grand American picture, 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington,' soon to be released; Frank Lloyd's 'The Tree of Liberty,' from Elizabeth Page's best-seller; 'U-Boat 29,' and Alexander Hall's production of 'Super Clipper.'"

All Is Not War That Flickers

But, as also has been pointed out here, it need not be feared that only stories of patriotic content will find their way to the screens of the country while the ominous situation develops abroad. Columbia, for instance, is laying equal stress upon the quality of non-martial entertainment that may be expected from his company's forthcoming releases of "His Girl Friday," Howard Hawks' newspaper story, based on the play of "Front Page," concerning which the producer-director told us something as long ago as the occasion of our long-distance telephone conversation at the time of the release of "Only Angels Have Wings;" "The Incredible Mr. Williams," co-starring Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell; "Blondie Brings Up Baby," "Illicit Cargo," starring Jack Holt, and "Renegade Law."

The week opening Friday in Washington should make it pretty clear whether major public interest runs to war stories or those which pursue the more tranquil tenor of peace-time days. There will be representative specimens of both on view.

In view of earlier excitations in their behalf, two of the "civilian" screen plays going on view Friday should be of particular interest. They are "The Star Maker," coming into Loew's Palace, and "The Under-Pup," to be seen at RKO-Keith's. These are the films which respectively introduce Deanna Durbin's ostensible "successors" as potential juvenile singing stars. Linda Ware is the youthful songbird appearing with Bing Crosby in "The Star Maker" and Gloria Jean, the even younger coloratura, who carries the burden of "The Under-Pup." Linda Ware it was who recently entertained a group of orphans on the set in Hollywood—one being sent out by Washington, under the auspices of the Variety Club—and Miss Jean who tipped Scranton, Pa., up on end when "The Under-Pup" was given its world premiere in her home town prior to her appearance as the singing star of "Gloria Jean Day" at the New York World's Fair. It will be necessary to wait until Saturday morning for an appraisal of these budding Galli Curcis. Hope you will be able to stick it out.

Eduardo Ciannelli, to be seen as one of the sinister figures in "The Angels Wash Their Faces," opening on the screen at the Earle tomorrow, might fool you, were you to meet him in private life. Probably identified most readily in popular memory as the actor who portrays the "tough egg" type of role with a shade more grimness than either George Raft or Humphrey Bogart, as a youth in his native Italy Signor Ciannelli's ambition was grand opera, despite the fact that his father wished him to be a doctor. He sang many important operatic roles in Rome, Florence and Milan, before landing in New York and eventually becoming an actor.

The management of Loew's Capitol Theater is in the "market" for scare-head newspaper clippings from the first World War. Probably there are hundreds of Washingtonians who have preserved scrapbooks of the 1914-1918 headlines and war stories as souvenirs of the world catastrophe that was supposed to be "the war to end all wars." If so, the Capitol would like to borrow appropriate samples to make up a lobby display to be used in conjunction with the world premiere showing of "Thunder Afloat," opening on F street tomorrow.

The reward for the generous owners of suitable World War clippings will be a pair of guest tickets each to see the picture based on actual activities of the United States Navy in the last holocaust. Just communicate with the Capitol management. It will do the rest.

Madeleine Carroll, lovely motion picture star, arrived in the Capital last evening on vacation. She flew in from Hollywood, having only recently returned from the other side. Plans are under way to pester her today with a press conference with the drama desks and other local newspaper people. More of this later. In the meantime, however, you should know that Miss Carroll soon will be seen on the Earle screen, with Fred MacMurray in "Honeymoon in Bali," nee "Are Husbands Necessary?" and soon, also, will return to the West Coast to make "Safari."

What-Are-Vacations-For Note

Resumes Her Natural Coloring

JOAN BENNETT,
whose chief screen renown has been achieved as a blonde, now assumes a new beauty and allure by reverting to her natural brunette coloring, as pictured above. Miss Bennett, resembling Hedy Lamarr more than ever, will next be seen in Universal's "Green Hell," in which Douglas Fairbanks, jr., will be the costar. Miss Bennett is the only woman in a cast of seven men

'Cavalcade' Revived at Little

In these fateful September days, the Coward master-work seems to shout not so much for Brittania, as for the cause of a dignified and peaceful way of life. And nowadays Coward's scenes of Geneva and empty churches and peace and disarmament, flanked as they are by his jittery song, "Twentieth Century Blues," are more bitterly ironic than they were in 1933. True to his custom, Mr. Coward has posed the question and not attempted to answer it, but he has posed it so effectively that the "Cavalcade" of this year is more stunning than it was before.

The chronicle of the Marryot family, their servants, the Bridges, and the changes that time brings must surely be remembered by all who have seen the film, but the tiny sidelights which become in these dasy to tremendously real are the photomontage shots of the onrushing years. The thrilling glory of the early days of the war, the strident sounds of martial music give place to carnage on the battlefields and the crosses of cemeteries. In this reissue, the Little's print is a new one, with no flaw in sight or sound to mar the technical splendor of the pageant.

Dianna Wynyard's portrayal of the Lady Jane, whose life was so eventful, is so remarkably moving that one must wonder what is happening to her today. Clive Brook, Herbert Mundin, Una O'Connor, Beryl Mercer, Ursula Jeans, Irene Browne, Merle Tottenham, Frank Lawton, Margaret Lindsay and John Warburton are today better known than when signed for this picture.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 13 (INS).—Ann (Oomph) Sheridan is traveling East September 23 to do her bit toward helping the American film market. She will have four weeks of personal appearances, opening at the New York Strand October 5. Just so the small hamlets and cities will know it is Sheridan herself, the car in which she travels will be called "Oomph." She will be accompanied by a maid, a dresser and secretary—all because this is her first visit to New York.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Aside from the personal exploitation aspects of the Sheridan trip, Warners are motivated by a desire to really do something for the exhibitors. Later, 30 players will be sent out to make appearances, so that business will be boosted. Recently Claire Windsor and Lya Lys returned from a tour and while they are not big names, the theaters where they appeared did big business.

RKO and Garson Kanin have kissed and made up. It was a cinch the studio would come to terms with the fair-haired boy who directed the money-making "Bachelor Mother" and before you can say Jack Robinson, he'll be at work on his new assignment, "Woman Overboard." Interesting to hear that Leo McCarey, who takes nobody's dust in the directing line, will limit his talents to merely producing this story by Sam and Ella Spewack. He won't reveal a thing about the yarn, except to admit it is a timely story without a war background—and they're dickering with Jean Arthur and Columbia to borrow her for the top femme role, if she doesn't do "His Girl Friday." In the meantime, the Ann Shirley picture that stirred up all the Kanin rumpus is being directed by George Nichols.

Robert Kane's rush to get back to London and Monty Banks' quick trip there reveal an interesting situation. Conditions abroad are not really so bad as have been pictured. Walter Futter, who is producing Leslie Howard's picture, "The Man Who Lost Himself," in London, writes, vie the Yankee Clipper, that unless a sudden Government edict prevents, he will start production immediately. Alexander Korda is continuing "The Thief of Bagdad" and will also make propaganda films. The theaters in France and England have reopened and, according to a letter received today, London looks for a boom in motion pictures in spite of the war. So it's really too bad so many small people lost their jobs, when the Hollywood producers, 6,000 miles away, got more scared than the London crowd right on the scene.

"The Road Back," Erich Maria Remarque's followup to "All Quiet on the Western Front," was so badly cut by German censorship, that James Whale, the director, was fit to be tied. Now that there is no chance of it being shown in Germany anyway, Universal has decided to put back the cuts and reissue the picture which, in its original state, I am told, was very good. In spite of the determination to make musicals and comedies, there is plenty of activity on war plays. Twentieth Century-Fox took a look at "What Price Glory," the high spot comedy of the war. Remember it with Vic McLaglen as Capt. Flagg and Edmund Lowe as Sergt. Quirt? It may be remade with a new team. I have had many letters on the subject of war pictures—both for and against—which I will discuss later.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Gus Edwards, so well love in theatrical circles, is very, very sick; the Smiley Burnettes have adopted a baby girl 17 months old, and is Smiley thrilled? Charlie Chaplin fell on his face laughing over Jack Oakie's test, so he signed him, of course. The first Chaplin scenes have been filmed and are in the can—and that's history; Tilly Losch writes that she has gone to Carnarvon Castle with her bridegroom, Lord Carnavon, and is caring for 20 war children billeted there; Dr. Joe Pressman took the Clipper for Honolulu today on a vacation, and it's my guess that Claudette Colbert will follow him; Ann Sothern has put her foot down and refused to let Roger Pryor continue his flying lessons.

The victory dinner at the Masquers was a real event, according to my favorite doctor, who was there. He said the actors paid great tribute to Ralph Morgan and Kenneth Thomson, who are credited with averting the strike; Lew Ayres was having himself a good time at the Cafe LaMaze with June Gale, Billy Bakewell and a girl I didn't recognize—maybe I should have asked her name! Ruth Chatterton opens in Cincinnati the 25th in "You Can't Eat Goldfish;" Billy Seymour and Jane Wyman doing a repeat at the Victor Hugo. Her steady company, Ronald Reagan, returns soon and then it will be interesting to see what happens; Jackie Coogan and Norma Hall, the Castoria heiress, stepdaughter to the Johnny Warburtons, stepping out. Jackie leaves Saturday for New York, to begin rehearsals for "What a Life."

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Steel Plants Swamped by Heavy Orders

Demand for Some Products Up 35 to 200 Over August Average

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 13.—Iron Age reported today that orders for steel, since the European war began, were "assuming almost fantastic proportions."

"Business has come in so fast," said the magazine, "as virtually to swamp the sales and clerical forces of steel companies.

"Under the circumstances, an accurate estimate of total bookings of the past ten days is impossible, but some products have gained from 35 to 200 per cent over their weekly averages of August.

"Comparatively little of the heavy inflow of tonnage has come from abroad. Export business has expanded, but not as greatly as domestic buying, the chief hindrance being the shipping situation.

Operating Rate Up to 71 Per Cent

"The sharp gain in business has been accompanied by a quick rise in steel ingot production to 71 per cent, a gain of 12 points over the Labor Day holiday week, and advancing scrap prices, which have raised the Iron Age scrap composite price to $16.75, a gain of $1.13 to the highest level since early October, 1937.

"Repeal of the neutrality act, which is confidently expected in well-informed circles, undoubtedly will add to industrial activity here if war is of long duration.

"Labor's full co-operaton in the tense period which lies ahead for the steel industry is assurd by Phillip Murray, head of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, who states to the Iron Age that 'whoever looks for the American steel workers to close the mills by irresponsible, unreasonable strikes now or in the future hour of still greater need will look in vain.' "

Birmingham Output Jumps

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 13 (AP).—Steel production in Alabama jumped five points today to 80 per cent of capacity as Birmingham mills accelerated output on orders attributed to fears war business would interrupt normal deliveries on railroad steel.

Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co., U. S. Steel subsidiary, added two open hearth furnaces to its production list after orders for 37,000 tons of rails were booked from three southeastern carriers.

A further increase before the start of the fourth quarter was for cast in industrial circles.

Buffalo Recalls Steel Workers

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 13 (AP).—The Hanna Furnace Corporation announced opening of a second blast furnace at its pig iron plant today, bringing the Buffalo area pig iron production rate to 70 per cent of capacity, highest in two years. Meanwhile, a newspaper survey indicates that more than 1,000 men have been recalled to work in Buffalo steel factories and the working hours of more than 5,000 others increased from an average of 30 to nearly 40 a week.

Selling Wave Drops Cotton In Final Hour

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—A wave of hedge selling hit the cotton futures market in the final minutes of trading today, causing a sharp break in prices to net declines of 13 to 19 points.

Most of the trading was at a slow pace. Weak Liverpool cables influenced a slightly lower opening here and prices moved narrowly most of the session. Straddle liquidation by Bombay interests early was offset by moderate price fixing which absorbed most offerings throughout.

Although the aggregate volume of hedge sales during the day was not particularly impressive, the bulk of it appeared shortly before the close. Most of the support near the end consisted of scale-down short covering and the market's vulnerability was quickly disclosed.

Liverpool futures declined the maximum limit of 25 points as the accumulated buying orders appeared to have been satisfied.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures finished 2 to 10 points lower today after a moderately active and mixed trade.

Profit-taking helped to meet demand and refiner hedging appeared to be larger than in recent sessions. Only a slight rally followed the Census Bureau August consumption 22,000 barrels higher than trade expectations.

Sales were 181 contracts. September closed *7.00; October, *7.13; December, *7.30; January, *7.37; March, 7.51.

Crude oil was steady. Southeast, Valley and Texas quoted 6⅛ to 6¼ cents nominal.

Philadelphia, Sept. 13.—A $17,000,000 program of equipment and property improvement was announced today by the Pennsylvania Railroad. President M. W. Clement said it called for 2,500 new freight cars, 20 new electric locomotives, three new streamlined passenger cars, 15 modernized passenger cars and 80,000 tons of rail.

The rails will include 50,000 tons of new orders and 30,000 tons now being rolled. The program also calls for repairs of 17,500 hopper gondolas and box cars during September and October. The freight car repair work will be one in the railroad's own shops.

The program was announced following a meeting of the railroad's board of directors.

Business on Upturn

"The best analysis that we have been able to make of industrial activity and its trend," Clement said, "is that business has been on the upturn, and this program on which we have been working for some months anticipates further realization of this trend.

"There has been a steady and continued rise in the volume of our traffic since last April, with present levels running well above last year and every prospect of a substantial seasonal advance in general business in the months ahead."

Clement said the program would provide more than 2,000,000 man hours of work in the shops alone. About 4,000 men would be added to the forces, he said.

The orders for 50,000 tons of steel rails are to be placed in the immediate future, Clement said.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—The New York Central Railroad has purchased 5,000 tons of rails, it was announced today by Willard F. Place, vice president in charge of finance.

The orders were divided: 2,000 tons to Bethlehem Steel Corporation, 2,500 tons to Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation and 500 tons to Inland Steel Corporation.

Profit-Taking Overcomes Buying Force War Stocks Spurt in Afternoon Trading U. S. Bonds Are Firm and Wheat Is Strong

New York, Sept. 13.—The call for a special session of Congress, at which it is assumed the President will be successful in obtaining the repeal of the present neutrality legislation, brought an afternoon spurt to war stocks today, but this supplied only a partial offset to profit-taking operations. The result was that the stock market closed lower by an average of 0.43 point in trading of 3,761,340 shares, the dullest session of the week.

Most markets moved within a narrower range than has been the case in the last few days. United States Government bonds had a welcome recovery of small proportions as some of the fears of higher interest rates subsided. Wheat was spectacular, advancing 3⅛ to 3⅝ cents a bushel in the sharpest gain since last Thursday. Calling of the special session and the order of the Soviet government to its ships to return to home ports were factors in this action.

Commodities, Except Wheat, Lower

Cotton sold off 13 to 19 points, closing near its lows, and the tendency of most other commodities was to retrace some of their recent advances. Sugar made up most of an early loss of 19 to 25 points, closing down 2 to 19 points with the pressure on the near months. Cocoa was irregular and virtually unchanged, rubber futures dropped 45 to 120 points, silk lost 15 cents, copper futures lost 13 to 21 points, zinc was off 20 points and raw hide futures gave up 17 to 31 points. While these losses were sizable, they were moderate in comparison with recent fluctuations and the day in securities and commodities was seen by speculators as one of consolidating. In the jargon of the Street, that is a word that can be used to describe relatively small fluctuations following a series of violent moves.

The range in the composite stock average amounted to only about 1½ points, which is nothing in these war markets. Aircraft issues and the oils received the most consistent pressure, and losses were general among the steels, metals and other issues directly afforded by the war. Merchandising shares grew in popularity as it was apparent consumers were stocking up as a hedge against rising prices, and there was continued support for the lower grade rails. All railroad systems are rushing repair programs and are calling men back to work to care for the sudden increase in traffic. The Pennsylvania announced a $17,000,000 equipment and property improvement plan, the New York Central ordered 5,000 tons of new rails, and most systems are rushing car repairs.

Corporations, the same as all other consumers, including housewives, are forsaking their former hand-to-mouth buying policies and stocking up. Naturally, this sudden rush of business is bringing higher prices and just as naturally this leads to charges of profiteering. Thurman W. Arnold, Assistant Attorney General and official trust-buster, served notice in a speech at Atlantic City today that his office would make generous use of criminal indictments to break up such profiteering.

Price Increases

Of course, if Mr. Arnold goes to the source of higher prices, he will have to bring criminal indictments against a few million housewives. Or he might call around at the Department of Agriculture where there are those who have devoted the last few years to destroying, and withholding from production vast areas formerly used in the production of cotton and wheat, or corn for hogs. Major price increases have taken place in grains, cotton and pork, and it was planned that way. It is a safe guess, however, that if the Assistant Attorney General is really going on a witch hunt to find those responsible for higher costs of food and other consumer goods, there will be a soft-pedaling of the influence on prices planned and executed by the New Deal. A more suitable sacrificial goat will be discovered.

A few more price increases were announced today, thus adding to the cost of doing business. Scrap copper, wool and carpets were pegged higher and the immediate prospect is for a continuation of the sellers' market.

Industry Picks Up

Midweek trade news reflected the sudden quickening in industrial activity. Power output in the week ended September 9 ran 11.8 per cent of the like week last year. It was off from the previous week, due to the Labor Day holiday. The Iron Age reported an almost unprecedented increase in steel orders, with sales and clerical forces of steel companies swamped. It places current operations at 71 per cent of capacity. Consumption of crude rubber for August was at a new high for the year and 16.8 per cent above the previous month. Stocks of gasoline were cut 950,000 barrels during the week ended September 9, the American Petroleum Institute.

New York Central was today's most active stock and along with Pennsylvania sold off a fraction. Steel gave up 3¼ points and Bethlehem 4½. Building shares were in favor, led by American Radiator, up nearly 2 points. Motors and Chrysler had losses of around 2 and 3 points, respectively, while among the metals Anaconda was the most active, giving up about 2.

Railroad Bonds in Demand

Listed bond dealings were brisk today, with interest tending to shift from the relatively inactive Treasury bonds to the speculative railroad and other securities which might benefit from any war boom. The high-grade investment bonds merely marked time, or drifted slightly lower, but the speculative obligations advanced sharply. Turnover in all issues was $16,463,000, with Treasury bonds accounting for 1,683,000. With almost $15,000,000 of corporate and foreign issues traded, the listed market actually had one of its best sessions since war started over in Europe.

Long-term Treasury bonds were stable and any buying that the Federal Reserve did was merely in driblets. Gains and losses of a few thirty-seconds of a point appeared. In short Treasury issues a decided buying wave was in evidence, almost all of the business being done over the counter. The buying of the shortest notes, already apparent in the previous session, extended to longer notes and short bonds, with gains ranging nearly to a half point. There was also better demand for the guaranteed issues.

Prime Bonds Dull

In the corporate section, best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were dull. Among speculative rails a heavy buying movement was in progress, with the advances ranging to 3 and 4 points. Both medium-priced interest payers and cheap default bonds were marked higher. Convertible bonds again did well, and some of the holding company issues also improved. Communications, amusement and other special groups advanced, with local tractions once more prominent on the up side.

In the foreign dollar section the tone remained highly uncertain. Canadian issues rallied from the depressing effects of the war declaration, but Australians were weak. Norwegian and Danish bonds advanced, while Belgians remained soft. German and Polish bonds merely hovered around former levels. Latin-Americans were quiet and uneven.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Today's quiz is made up of questions sent by contributors. The answers to the two problems are our own. If you disagree, it is all right with us.

Question 1, from R. A. L.: "When playing contract the other evening, my partner opened the bidding with a demand bid for two diamonds. Her holding was:

♡ None
◇ A K Q J 10 2
♣ Q J 8 7 3 2

"We arrived at a small slam and did not make our contract. I asked my partner if she thought she had a demand bid; she said, 'Yes,' and quoted Culbertson as saying a two-suiter hand was a demand bid. I don't believe the hand has enough honors. What is correct?"

Question 2, from S. K.: "In the following situation, declarer (South) leads the club queen; West hesitates before playing. (a) Is West's hesitation ethical? (b) Is such hesitation permitted in a tournament?"

♣ A 6 2
SOUTH

Answers to Questions

1. There are two schools of thought concerning the two-suit forcing bid; one sanctions the call with distributional freaks as well as with hands powerful in top tricks; the other permits the force only on hands massed with high cards. Culbertson straddles the breach, advocating that the two-demand should be made on hands containing more than five honor tricks, yet permitting an occasional distributional two-bid. His formula is elastic. "Open a two-bid in a suit if the hand contains a biddable suit and more honor tricks than losers," he says.

But even this free interpretation would not allow a two-diamond call on the hand in question. Maximum honor-trick value of the hand is 2½; minimum number of losers, three.

2. No one but West can decide whether or not his resitation was unethical. It is a matter his honor must rule upon.

West may have hesitated inadvertently; he may have been thinking about something else or he may be a naturally slow player.

There is no penalty, be it inadvertent or deliberate. If R. A. L. believes it was deliberate, having experienced similar infractions he has the option of speaking to the player and trying to explain that his conduct is against the laws of ethics or refraining from playing with him.

In a tournament if such hesitation should affect declarer's play, he would have a right to call the director, state his case, and await the director's decision.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

The almost 1,000,000 jobs in the executive branch of the Federal Government are spread among the residents of the 48 States nearly in exact proportion to their populations, except for the District whose residents comprise less than one-half of 1 per cent of the Nation's population but who hold more than 13 per cent of the total Government jobs, a study by the Civil Service Commission showed yesterday.

The study, the first such survey ever made, was compiled by the division of statistics on the basis of December 31, 1938 figures. It showed that 120,931, or 19.29 per cent of the District's 627,000 residents occupied Federal positions.

New Yorkers held the next largest number of Government jobs, 98,048, or 10.61 per cent of all Federal employment. The State has 8.91 per cent of the Nation's population. Pennsylvanians, holding 54,893 jobs, and Californians, with 51,919 positions, followed.

In almost all instances, the ratio of total jobs held by residents of a State corresponded within 1 or at most 2 per cent with the ratio of the State's population to the Nation's total.

Besides the District, a notable exception, was the Canal Zone, the home of three one-hundredths of the country's population, where 29.34 per cent of the citizens held Government jobs, a ratio even higher than the District's. Canal Zone residents occupied 1.27 per cent of all Federal jobs.

The opposite extreme was in the Philippine Islands, whose population of more than 9 per cent of the Nation's total held slightly more than one-half of 1 per cent of the country's Government jobs. Only .04 of 1 per cent of the population worked for the Government. In Alaska, on the other hand, 3.63 per cent of the population had Federal jobs.

Over the country as a whole, .64 of 1 per cent of the population was employed by the Government.

National Archivist R. D. W. Connor, mildly annoyed at the prevailing opinion that the word "archives" connotes only dusty and yellowed old parchments, set out to prove that his establishment also deals in material as up to date as next week's headlines. Instead of displaying exclusively old treaties, autographs of James Monroe and expense accounts of Ben Franklin, he recently put under the glass of the Archives' super-fancy exhibition hall the recent neutrality and limited emergency decrees of that eminently modern fellow, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

To the Archives officers' considerable surprise, visitors were nearly trampled in the rush to the cases, and lined up four deep to read them. Citizens whose attention to the orders when they were published could be described as somewhat less than rapt, read the pronouncements word for word when they saw the original decrees.

Harry G. Ritner, chief of staff, District and Maryland Department of the Regular Veterans Association, advises disabled peace-time veterans that the increases due them in pensions effective September 1 are strictly automatic, and none need to harry the Veterans' Administration about it.

Since some 32,000 claims are expected to be effected, Ritner notes, it will take several months to adjudicate all the cases. Those now in receipt of pensions, he says, have their claims already on file and these will be reviewed. Pestering the Veterans' Administration is not only unnecessary but actually tends to delay the process.

Even now that the Jefferson nickel has been issued, and the buffalo jitney is all of 25 years old, surprised citizens are still writing in to the Indian Bureau to ask if the brave on the head of the coin is old Chief Osky Wa-Wa, or what not, who lives around the corner.

Scores of Americans write to insist that the bas-relief is a picture of some Indian whom they know, and even many Indians write in with the word that the face was modeled from that of their grandpappy, late of 33 Teepee Alley, West Umbrellastand, Okla.

The Indian Office patiently replies that while the picture of Jefferson on the Jefferson nickel is undoubtedly meant to represent a certain single individual who once lived at Monticello, the Indian head was modeled from no single person, but is meant to be only a composite, a distillate, a type or an epitome of the Indian brave. It is, so to speak, a metallic photomontage.

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

CHAPTER XXXIII

OBVIOUSLY the next step was to find out if there had been any damage aft, which was where I was. As the first fringes of the flashlight approached, I glanced hastily around and saw that I had as much chance of hiding as if I'd landed on the back of a whale. The stern of the speedboat was that streamlined. The grating I had struck was a band about four feet wide running down the center of the stern. Without so much as a life line around it, it was what passed for an afterdeck on this craft.

DYER

As the beam came nearer, two men appeared from the hatch; there was a check while the light changed hands. Mr. Raskin's voice asked somebody if he was sure. Then he walked along the grating shooting the rays this way and that, until—what should he see but me.

I was making shift to get to my feet. This told me plainly enough that my wrist was sprained. My right hand had practically no strength in it. I could do nothing but straighten up and face the light. It was Mr. Raskin's move.

He didn't make the move I expected.

He said, after an instant of hesitation: "Why, Mr. Marriner. What an extraordinary coincidence! What a fortunate coincidence. Nothing was further from my mind than to think that you were on that fisherman we brushed by. I trust you came aboard without harm?"

He didn't sound sarcastic. There was even a sort of earnestness—I won't say pleading—in his voice. I couldn't figure what it was all about.

"Where's Miss Blake?" I said, not returning any of his pretense that we were glad to see each other.

"In the cabin, my boy. In the cabin Quite safe and happy to be with us on this historic occasion. She came with us quite willingly, you know, to help demonstrate a most important by-product of the Sea Reduction Corporation. A by-product which, I might say, threatens to steal the whole show. Haha. I told you that your president had more up his sleeve than he could let you know the other day. You have arrived at a big moment, a big moment, in the life of the Sea Reduction Corporation. Your company, Mr. Marriner. Miss Blake's company."

My first impulse was to ask him why, if he was so delighted to have me aboard, he hadn't asked me in the first place. But where would that have got me? The adventures of the last few days had taught me the word Caution. Maybe I was doing some growing up. Instead I said:

"I know all about that. What's going on?"

"Ah, you'll find out soon enough, my boy. In the meantime, I want you to meet a most distinguished guest of the company, just with us for the night. This is Mr. Marriner, one of our most influential stockholders—" The figure of a man had been standing silently and almost invisibly behind him. Without raising the beam of his light from the deck, Mr. Raskin swung about a few degrees, and a little more illumination fell on this other person. From what I was able to make out he was a tall man, half a head higher than the promoter—about my height, I guess, but not as heavy. He was wearing a long dark overcoat and a stiff-brimmed hat. His face was a round white blur.

"Mr. Marriner," said Raskin, "this is Count—" he said something that sounded like "Jacob van Folk."

"I didn't catch the name," I said, mechanically.

"It doesn't matter," put in the stranger in a strong pleasant voice. "The title is only slightly genuine, and the rest is an out-and-out invention. Rather happy, too, I think. It has such an air of noncommittal gentility. I have, to be honest, used it before in America. The title I assumed purely to please and impress Mr. Raskin."

THE FLAVOR of this remark caught all my attention. There was a certain humorous deviltry hidden in it, and because it pricked the pomposity of a man I disliked, I was inclined to like the speaker. The voice was that of a highly educated foreigner who had learned his English (and dropped all but the faintest trace of an outlander's accent) in England.

"Ah, well, Count," said Mr. Raskin, being jocular, "I guess when you're at home your title can be as high as any one could wish. We can accept the happy accident of Mr. Marriner's arrival for what it's worth, eh? Shall we go below and get ahead with our tests?"

The three of us had a moment of confusion at the cabin hatch which a little spoiled the fine smoothness of our conversation. None of us wanted to go in ahead of either of the others. Eventually the "count" ducked down the steps, and I followed him, hanging on with my left hand to my right wrist, which had begun to throb to beat a bass drum. Mr. Raskin followed me close, and hissed in my ear the explanation for all his present oiliness: "The whole future of the Sea Reduction Corporation depends on the count's being sold on the performance of this boat." As he said the words "corporation" and "performance" (which he pronounced "preformance") he lightly sprayed the back of my neck with spit.

I didn't mind it a bit. There was Adriana Blake slumped in a chair by a table covered with charts in one corner of the cabin. She was shaken and dejected in appearance, and looked up dully when we came in. The minute she saw me it was as if an electric lamp had been turned on inside her face. I walked over to her, grinning. She jumped up and faced me. It was a little bit too public to do what I wanted to. We didn't have anything to say for a couple of seconds, then she whispered:

"I knew you'd come—somehow—Garry."

"I'm intelligent as hell," I whispered back, "but if you knew I'd come you're crazy."

That was all we had time for. There was too much going on.

Mr. Raskin and the "count" were engaged in a talk that was velvety on top and steely underneath. Said the "count:"

"No, my friend. It is not necessary for you to put your admirable ship through any more of her paces for me. I have seen everything I wished to see. You will now put me ashore. Shall we say at Newport?"

"I'll put you ashore if you want," said Mr. Raskin, "but let's say Menemsha, not Newport. I didn't have a chance to show you anything there."

"No, my friend. I have developed a sudden antipathy for islands. Instead a craving comes over me for some cosy harbor on the mainland. Let it be Newport."

"But——" began the promoter.

"I said, my friend, let it be Newport, and let us go there directly."

THE STEEL was chilling through the velvet in this sentence, and I could see Mr. Raskin beginning to give in, sulkily. The tall stranger was turned toward me and toward the reflection of light from the chart table. I could now see how handsome and clever and hard his features were. And he was young, too, not much older than I. But he had that stamp of maturity on his face which comes from living recklessly through many terrible years. He was a man who looked as if he should wear a duelling sword.

"O. K." said the promoter, with bad grace, "I'll drop you at Newport."

"Shall we say a public wharf? Let us avoid the Naval Training Station, for instance. Your Navy would be embarrassed to find out later who they had let go by at 3 in the morning without a martial reception. Am I not correct?" The air of elaborate playfulness had crept back into his voice.

"I'll put you off at the wharf of my own shipyard," said Mr. Raskin.

"No. No. No. The simplest public dock will be enough for an unassuming person like me. Really, now, I have met so many of your charming friends tonight, by sheer coincidence," he barely perceptibly stressed the words, "that I feel I have done all that is socially necessary." He bowed deeply to the girl, and then to me. "You shall run up alongside the dock of the Providence steamship line, and you will see me hop ashore as nimble as quicksilver."

Without further delay the promoter stepped to an engine-room telegraph near the wheel and angrily jerked it to full speed ahead. A bell rang, right under our feet. The vast vibration began again. Out of the shadows on the port side of the cabin appeared a figure I had not seen before. As he stepped forward I caught a glimpse of the bitter mahogany face of Big Jack, the Indian watchman at the Sea Reduction plant. He took the wheel from his employer, and from then on was only a bent back turned expressionlessly upon the rest of the people in the cabin.

Mr. Raskin came to where the girl and I were standing and pointed out two seats on either side of the companionway. He suggested shortly that we sit on them, and advised us to fasten ourselves in with the safety belts attached to them. Then he went to the chart table and laid out a course. The result he shouted in the helmsman's ear, then strapped himself into a seat at the right of the wheel. He put on headphones and began to twiddle the dials of some special kind of radio set.

The "count" had already belted himself into a place at the left. He also was wearing headphones, and engaged in an employment similar to Mr. Raskin's. A shaded light fell on the complicated board before him, and on it I could make out the words: "Micro-wave Obstacle Detector. Societe Francaise Radio-Electrique." I knew nothing about the instrument, but I certainly honed it was 100 per cent effective. From the tremble of those engines under our feet, we must be moving across the black waters at the speed of an airplane. We'd need to detect any obstacle a long way ahead.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.
